County holds off on controversial tax assessment

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

After weeks of debate and an intensive letter campaign by the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations, county council has decided to postpone implementing Market Value Assessment.

But that doesn't mean the subject is dead. Over the next year, individual municipalities plan to hold public meetings to explain why the county wants to implement MVA and the impact it would have.

"We have to do something to explain it," said Bicroft Reeve Bill Howe, whose municipality ironically is the only one in Haliburton County to have MVA. "You look at it and it scares everyone."

"I hope this council would realize it's very important we do get to the public," said Sherborne et al Reeve Don Shortreed. "We also have to think of the people who are paying an unfair share" of taxes, which MVA is designed to rectify.

Since Glamorgan is one of those municipalities which would benefit from MVA, Reeve Bob McCausland stressed that MVA will eventually have to be addressed.

MVA would ensure that everyone in the county with a property valued at, for instance, $75,000 would pay the same tax. Right now taxes vary from municipality to municipality, and from property to property within one municipality.

There are two ways to implement the new assessment scheme: Section 63 would result in few changes because commercial properties would continue to pay a higher rate of tax; under Section 70, residential and commercial properties would be assessed at the same rate (municipalities would still have a higher mill rate for commercial properties) and there will be a shift of about $1-million from commercial to residential taxes.

Because lakeshore properties have increased dramatically in value, taxes for these properties will nonetheless probably increase. FOCA says that using 1988 as the base year is unfair because property values were at a peak and have since decreased.

Municipalities are also concerned provincial funding would decrease once a higher assessment would suggest the county has a greater ability to pay for programs. As well, under MVA Sherborne will lose $60,000 and Dysart et al $40,000 in grants in lieu of taxes from municipal lands which are now part of Algonquin Park.

Family of three gets burnt out in Donald fire

by MARTHA PERKINS

A family of three lost nearly everything they owned when their Old Donald house burnt to the ground on a frigid Friday night.

Seventeen Dysart volunteer firemen responded to a call at 5:30 p.m. When they arrived at the home of Marion Teatro and her sons, Jamie and Jeffrey, "there was smoke coming out all the windows and the fire had already got in between the walls," says Fire Chief Miles Maughan.

"That was our biggest problem — we couldn't get the water in. There's just not much we can do, just the best we can."

Maughan estimates the damage to be $130,000. The fire started in the basement, where there was a furnace, but the cause is as yet undetermined.

Jeffrey Teatro, 14, and his friend D.J. Gunn- ing were at the house drying off from a day of skiing during Carnival Day when they noticed smoke coming from the register, Mrs. Teatro says. The teenager tried pouring water down the

MPP debating wisdom of not paying his fine

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Now that he must keep his constituents' interests in mind, MPP Dennis Drainville is re-assessing whether he will spend a month in jail rather than pay a fine for his role in the Temagami protest.

After being found guilty of mischief for taking part in a peaceful blockade of the Red Squirrel logging road in December 1989, Drainville was expecting the harshest sentence would be a fine. As a matter of principle, he said he would not pay the fine and would go to jail if necessary.

However, the newly-elected MPP was "a bit shocked" when on February 13, Judge Robert Fournier sentenced Drainville to a week in jail plus a $750 fine. If he doesn't pay the fine, the jail term would be increased to one month.

Drainville said his pre-sentence stance was based on the premise he would only be fined. "If ordered to jail, does that not make the other one redundant (as a protest)," he says in reference to adding three weeks onto his term. And, he stresses in a telephone interview Friday, he does not take lightly the possibility of spending any time in jail. "Let me be clear I am concerned about whether I go to jail for 30 days or for a week."

Asked whether it would be fair to his constituents for him to spend a month in jail — thereby putting much parliamentary and riding work on hold — Drainville says

No more smoking in parking lot

Board changes policy

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Haliburton County elementary school teachers won't have to sit in their cars to smoke anymore.

Following a quick debate at yesterday's meeting, the board of education decided to rescind the fourth part of its policy which banned smoking on its property. Smoking will still be prohibited inside all board buildings.

In January the board discussed whether to allow elementary school teachers to smoke on school property. But it decided to hold off on a decision until high school teachers could be included.

High school teachers were left out of a policy change in December when the board allowed high school students to light up in a designated area.

"I don't believe elementary school students should witness their teachers smoking," said Trustee Craig Pettit. He was worried the teachers would be setting a bad example. Other trustees did not agree.

"The adults we're talking about have the best interest of the students at heart," said Trustee Mary Anne Wilson. "I think the teachers are pretty discreet," added trustee Wayne Wood.

"Couldn't we have a designated smoking area for teachers and visitors somewhere on the property?" asked Trustee Len Salvatori. The board felt enforcing such an area would be next to impossible.

"I don't remember having any problems when smoking was permitted just outside the schools' doors," said board Chairman Cheryl Murdoch. "I don't remember hearing any complaints."

Echo to be a Tuesday paper

This issue of The Haliburton County Echo marks the end of an era. It is the last time that the newspaper will publish on Wednesday. Beginning with next week's issue, The Echo will appear in stores and local mailboxes on Tuesday mornings.

Why the change? There are several reasons, all of them designed to benefit readers and advertisers.

Getting the newspaper out a day earlier will give advertisers even better value for the money they spend. Their messages will be in the hands of potential customers by Tuesday, with five days remaining in the business week, instead of four. This is particularly important to local grocery stores, but also to retailers who want to run end of the week sales.

Advancing publication by a day should also mean that more out-of-town readers will get their copy of The Echo before the weekend, although in the face of steadily declining service by Canada Post, that that remains to be seen.

With Tuesday publication, Echo reporters will still be able to attend weekend events and have photographs and news coverage in that week's edition.

The change will put even more pressure on the editorial staff, who already are no strangers to weekend work and Sundays spent in front of a computer. They'll be doing their best to cope with the new publishing schedule and still bring readers the kind features and community coverage that has earned the paper nearly 50 awards in the past few years.

Since the newspaper must be completed by 8 pm Monday to meet scheduling at the McLaren Press printing plant in Bracebridge, deadlines for classified and display advertising must be advanced. Starting this week, the deadline for all forms of advertising, as well as for editorial submissions, will be Fridays at 5 p.m.

It may take a week or two for everyone to get used to the new deadlines, but with your co-operation, the transition should be accomplished with a minimum of problems.

We hope you enjoy seeing us sooner!

MTO changes get some flack

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The Ministry of Transportation wants to create a major east-west corridor from Kilmount to Maynooth, but Cardiff's reeve wants nothing to do with it if it means turning part of Highway 648 into a county road.

Kilmount and Harcourt are presently linked by Highways 503 and 648 through Wilberforce. These are secondary highways and Bob Thompson, district engineer for the Bancroft office, says the MTO would like to upgrade them to the higher King's highway standards. The highway would then continue for 17.3 kilometres along what is now Elephant Lake Road and 16.5 km of the Peterson Road in Hastings County.

In partial exchange, the MTO wants the portion of Highway 648 from Harcourt to Highway 121 through Highland Grove to become a county road. (This is the easterly half of what's known as "The Loop.")

But this would cut off Highland Grove from tourist traffic, said

More needy families send assistance costs skyward

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The number of cases is down but the costs are up as more families seek help from the Haliburton County Social Services Department.

Sixty-four cases were closed in January as people who were laid off in the fall began receiving unemployment insurance. But with new applications, which is typical in January, the overall decrease in caseload was only seven, Director Morris Honeyman reported at Wednesday's county council meeting.

Many of the new clients have families, and the province has also given its yearly increase in payments, driving January's costs to $172,850. The county must pay roughly 20 per cent of that.

This is added to the county's cost of $98,500 for last year's deficit as the recession forced more people to apply for assistance.

At a recent Association of Municipalities of Ontario conference, municipal leaders threatened that a welfare-payment boycott may be the best way to convince the government to pay 100 per cent of welfare costs.

Such a tactic will only hurt the recipients, and ultimately the county because welfare payments are spent in the county, Honeyman says.

"You've got to spend the money before you get the money back from the province," Honeyman says. For instance, the county must pay January's costs and then apply for the 80 per cent subsidy. If the county decides to pay half the costs in protests, it will only receive subsidies on half.

But Honeyman doesn't think a boycott will be necessary. In the past few weeks, he's been receiving many inquiries from provincial officials, asking how much money was spent in the past year.

"I am quite, quite convinced something's coming down the pipe from Queen's Park," Honeyman says.

Meanwhile, he says local recipients are optimistic jobs will be available in the spring. "Most people feel 'What can we do? We have to admit we're caught in the recession and it can't last for too long.'"

Honeyman isn't as hopeful. "I just don't think here you can recoup unless you have a large industrial base and we don't have that. We're more geared to tourists and tourists need the money to come here."

Tragedies bring out neighbourly support

register, thinking he could put the fire out. Soon the main floor was filled with black smoke and because he could not find the number of the fire department, he phoned his mother at her hairdressing salon, Haliburton Hairdressing.

"He was screaming and I couldn't tell who he was," says Margot McCrae, who answered the phone. "He kept yelling 'There's a fire, get mom.' I didn't know whose kid he was. When I found out it was Jeff, I just said 'Drop the phone and get out of the house.'"

McCrae then phoned the fire department, which responded within 10 minutes. Water from tankers was used until a pump was linked with a nearby marsh.

When Jeffrey and D.J. first left the house, Jeffrey was wearing shorts and both boys had little on their feet. Jeffrey grabbed some boots and a jacket, and neighbours helped them get other warm clothes. Two cats were inside the house, and they wouldn't come out when Jeffrey called. He left a back window open and on Sunday night, cat tracks were seen around the debris.

"I started to cry and I had to find the boys," Mrs. Teatro says of her first reaction upon reaching the house. "I wasn't very good until once I got both my boys with me. Then I calmed down."

Sixteen-year-old Jamie had also been at the house with a friend that afternoon, but they had left to return a sled. After watching the fire for 15 minutes with his mother and brother, Jamie's suggestion that they leave was a welcome one.

"They're quite upset," Mrs. Teatro says, especially as the realization of everything they've lost sinks in. Yet she still manages a smile when she says the boys were also distraught about going to school without blowdrying their hair first. "Do you know how disastrous it is to have two teenaged boys without a blowdryer?"

On Friday night, Mrs. Teatro went to the home of her insurance broker. Betty Hodgson wasn't home but Mrs. Teatro knew she was friends with Dorelle Baker and knocked on Mrs. Baker's door. Her guess was correct and Hodgson immediately phoned the insurance company; a meeting was arranged for 8:30 that night. Meanwhile, the Teatros booked into Silver Maple Motel.

On Saturday, Mrs. Teatro had clients so she had to work. "I was just on automatic — I don't remember doing anyone's hair." That afternoon, they moved into a furnished cabin at Kenmar Lodge and Mrs. Teatro bought the supplies they'd need immediately: clothes for the boys, food and blankets.

The Teatros had begun renting the house in June and she bought it in November. "We had done so many little things just to make it home," she says, describing the new wallpaper, paintings and room full of craft supplies.

The fire was the second blow of the past year. In November, Mrs. Teatro's truck was totalled in an accident and she suffered a broken collar and cracked ribs. She couldn't return to work until January 3.

But both tragedies have proved to Mrs. Teatro just how lucky she is to be living in Haliburton. "It's like being part of a family. All my ladies, I've been doing their hair for 25 years. They all mother me or grandmother me. You couldn't ask for anything better than that. And the neighbours were fantastic. I don't even know all of them."

A benefit dance is being planned and although she does have insurance, the next few months will be difficult as the family tries to piece their life back together again. (The must move out of Kenmar Lodge by mid-June.)

"I don't even know what I need," she says. "Right now I'm just living from day to day. I'm a survivor."

Waste management to be discussed

The citizens of Haliburton County are invited to attend a Waste Management Education seminar March 9. It will be held between 1 and 5 p.m., at the Haliburton Legion. This seminar will be hosted by the Public Liaison Committee of Haliburton County's Waste Management Master Plan.

The seminar will explain the processes being used to determine where and how you waste will be disposed of in the future. This seminar will also highlight important methods the public can use to influence the decisions made during this study. If you plan to attend this seminar or would like more information on the Waste Management Master Plan please contact Len Munt, Waste Management Coordinator, at 705-286-1333. Your participation can make a difference!

Jail alters MPP's perspective

"we're still trying to figure out" how to respond to the judge's sentencing.

"Obviously that's a consideration just as obviously it's not the only consideration," he says. Laughing, he adds "my wife has a certain vested interest" and "there's also my own life I want to lead. . . The whole perspective had a very different focus before and now all the considerations are far different. . . It's not simple to say what we should do."

The Teme Augama Anishnabai, who spearheaded the Temagami blockade because they feel the land belongs to them, would not criticize him if he does pay the fine, Drainville says.

As well, Drainville has been "buoyed" by people's reactions across the riding. Most people support his position, he says. "They see this as a good thing, not a bad thing. I am touched that many people have reached out with their support."

Drainville feels Judge Fournier is unfairly trying to make an example of him by imposing a heavy sentence. A Jesuit priest who was with Drainville at the blockade and who used the same defence was acquitted of the same charge. Of the seven people who have been sentenced — 227 were charged, including Drainville's wife, Donna Quance — all received different sentences from Judge Fournier.

The impact of the judge's comments put everyone in a "state of shock", says Drainville, who was visibly shaken when the sentence was announced. However, now he is "very calm" about it. "I'm not a child. I knew what I was doing and why I was doing it. . . The judge was within his rights to impose a sentence he felt was appropriate."

Because he is appealing the guilty verdict, Drainville will not go to jail before the appeal is heard.

Known as a person who gets intensely involved with various social and native issues, Drainville was asked whether he's got a new cause after spending five hours in jail the day he was sentenced.

"Let me say I am a person who's deeply affected by my experiences and that was an experience that brought to light there's a very great need for change."

Judge Fournier explains reasons behind sentence

The following is an excerpt of Judge Robert Fournier's 10-page sentence of MPP Dennis Drainville. It was reported on February 14 by the Northern Daily News, a newspaper in Kirkland Lake.

Judge Fournier said the penalty imposed [one week jail term and $750 fine] must be "denunciatory" of Rev. Drainville's "rejection of the rule of law."

"Father Drainville [the MPP is also an Anglican priest] apparently does not believe in the rule of law, nor is he repentant. . . Here is a person who, as an elected member of our provincial Parliament, has allegedly sworn allegiance to Her Majesty, the Queen, and yet displays very little respect or recognition for the rule of law, which is the very foundation of the system which elected him in the first place."

"In this particular instance, even if it could be said that the accused and his fellow protesters were ultimately proven right, even if the Government was to take action to rectify previous wrongs, demonstrating to the population that the position taken by the protesters was the correct one, this court cannot and must not condone their actions at the expense of the rule of law."

Judge Fournier said Rev. Drainville's high standing in society makes it important for the courts to impose a strong sentence that will deter others from taking part in similar activities.

"In addition to being an Anglican priest, he is now an elected member of the provincial legislature and as such a 'legislator' of this province. He is chair of the ruling government's caucus and as such is perceived at least — if not in actual fact — as an influential person. Because of his position of trust and responsibility, his conduct could have a substantial impact or influence on others."

Drainville, who is appealing the mischief verdict, says the judge is being too harsh. At the time of the protest in December 1989, Drainville notes, he was not an elected MPP.

MAN INJURED IN ACCIDENT: Todd Galea, 27 of Minden, was at the wheel of this truck when it went into a ditch and rolled over Sunday night on Highway 121 near the Bethel Church Road. His passenger was seriously injured and was sent to a Toronto hospital. Minden OPP are investigating.

Dysart alone in voting against sign by-laws

Dysart's reeve and deputy-reeve were alone in voting against the county's new sign by-law.

Bill Davis and Lloyd Leadbeater feel some businesses are being penalized by the by-law while their fellow county councillors felt additions could be made later to allow for hardship cases.

The by-law follows on the heels of the 1986 by-law which got the roads department into trouble when it was enforced in 1990. Based partly on the Ministry of Transportation's rules about where signs can be placed, the new by-law has been in the works for the past few months.

In that time, the roads committee has only received four or five letters of concern, said committee chairman Bob McCausland.

Dysart's concerns were based on the situation of Dysart Councillor Brian Watts, who also owns Rip's Sleepy Hollow in West Guilford. Although he could pay for space on the county road accessing his trailer park, there is no suitable land in the short distance. Watts says a fingerboard sign, which is permissible under the new by-law, does not give him sufficient space to advertise his business.

"Are we penalizing people who are off a county road by a short distance?" Davis asked at Wednesday's county council meeting before the vote was taken.

"There's nothing that says we can't have amendments at a later date," said Sherborne et al Reeve Don Shortreed, who as a businessman said he was content with the by-law.

DON'T TIE THAT YELLOW RIBBON: Lutterworth council rejected an offer from the Minden Legion to hang a plywood ribbon on the flagpole outside its municipal office, unlike Stanhope, which displays the symbol of support for troops in the Middle East. The Legion has hung eight ribbons at various locations.

Council unties ribbons

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Tying a yellow ribbon around a pole to support Canadians in the Gulf is a personal statement that should not be made by municipalities, Lutterworth council decided Thursday.

Council rejected a request by the Royal Canadian Legion in Minden to hang a wooden yellow ribbon on the flagpole outside its office.

"We shouldn't get into it as a municipality or a council. It's a personal choice," said Councillor Maurice Boyd, adding the Gulf War has tarnished Canada's image as a peacekeeper.

Other councillors agreed, some for different reasons.

"I feel badly our guys are over there to begin with," said Councillor Bill Valentine. "There's a lot of people hanging yellow ribbons who have never had a soldier go overseas. It's hypocritical as far as I'm concerned. It's as American as (President George) Bush."

The Legion is using 15" wooden ribbons because of their durability.

Eight have already been hung, including two outside the Minden Legion, one at the county office in Minden and one on the flagpole outside Stanhope's municipal office.

"I was quite surprised Lutterworth decided to say no, especially since everyone else was so enthusiastic," said Dave McAdam, vice-president of the Minden Legion. "I'm a little disappointed."

Volunteers put the plywood ribbons together and McAdam said more can be made for anyone who is interested.

"If I had enough of them I would hang them on every pole up and down main street," he said.

Two-tier OP is accepted

County council has unanimously decided to go ahead with a two-tier County Official Plan, which will include Official Plans for each municipality.

Municipal councils have just been given the OP's draft terms of reference, and comments are to be made within the next two weeks.

In the past months, individual councils have made it clear they do not favour one-tier county government, which would give more power to the county, leaving municipalities with a reduced role.

Cardiff against changes to Hwy 648 standards

Cardiff Reeve Maurice Bradley at Wednesday's county council meeting when the proposal was made. When Thompson said the road would still be there, Bradley said that it wouldn't have the same standards as a secondary highway.

As well, "if you reduce a highway serving as the main thrust (of the community), I don't see you benefiting anyone in our area," Bradley said. "You will get strong opposition to it."

"You've got to look at not just the good of one isolated community but of the whole county," Thompson said. The new highway would be more easily identifiable and attractive on road maps, and with improved road conditions, would help draw people through the area, he said.

"The name of the game is to get people up here and let them branch off from there," said Sherborne et al Reeve Don Shortreed.

In other parts of the plan, the MTO would like to re-surface Highway 121 between Kinmount and Minden (14.5 km) and then turn it over to the county. The county would also get six km of Highway 503 from the Peterborough County border to Gooderham and the 4.8 km of Highway 648 from Dyno Mines to Highway 121.

In return, the MTO would provide a five-year free maintenance package. Thompson said they've been trying to transfer these roads for years and with the maintenance package and work on the proposed east-west corridor, "we're putting our money where our mouth is."

However, instead of making part of Highway 507 into a county road, Glamorgan Reeve Bob McCausland would like to see it linked up with County Road 3 (Buckhorn Road) from Gooderham to Haliburton. Since Highway 507 in Peterborough County has been improved, this has become the major route between Haliburton and Peterborough. By turning County Road 3 into a highway, the road's standards, and therefore access for travellers and ambulances, would be improved.

WHITE KNIGHTS OF THE ROAD: Two of the provincial police force's new cruisers have been delivered to the Minden OPP office. Black and white are traditional OPP colours, but it's too expensive to have cars painted in both colours. Because white is more visible, and cooler in the summer time, the new Chevrolets feature an all-white exterior with yellow reflective tape and insignia. Eventually all cruisers will be like this one shown off by Const. Mike Maybee, with one of the older cruisers in the background.

MOE lake testing stalled; Lutterworth lakes on waiting list

Prior commitments of the Ministry of the Environment will stall a population control survey of three Lutterworth lakes for at least another season, council was told Thursday.

Gull, Davis and Moore Lakes are presently on the list of lakes the MOE will review, with Davis Lake eighth in line.

But the MOE says "other priority commitments" have prevented a review taking place of these lakes in 1991.

The MOE also attached a survey form to collect information on each of the lakes to help determine which ones need immediate attention.

Due to the complexity of the needed data, council will ask local cottage associations for help.

County is asked to chip in $73,500 to spread the word Chamber devises marketing plan

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Although recessions make budgeting difficult, the Chamber of Commerce doesn't want the county to forget what a major role tourism plays in the local economy.

To help the Chamber promote tourism and market the Highlands, it is asking the county for $73,500, a five per cent increase over the Chamber's 1990 grant of $70,000.

"There is no point dwelling on the difficult economic environment that currently envelops our county," Chamber director Shawn Hagerman told county council Wednesday. "Real estate has been very slow, building starts are down, the forestry industry is struggling both with the economy, government interference in licensing, and most recently the fire at Martin's Lumber."

Tourism has also felt the bite of these tough times, but certain sectors are holding their own, Hagerman added. And as a result of monies spent on tourism shows and marketing, the Chamber office has received 10,000 calls in the past year, and 1,000 calls in January alone.

"We have answered calls about the Sled Dog Derby, ski and snowmobile trails, lodge to lodge skiing, fishing, winter carnivals, downhill skiing, and the upcoming summer season," he said.

To continue with this success, as part of its request for $73,500 the Chamber wants to spend $12,500 on shows and $16,500 on the 1-800 number and marketing by mail. Other monies would be spent on: Central Ontario Tourism Association membership, $4,000; promos and giveaways, $2,500; co-op advertising, $6,000; familiarization tours for writers and tour packagers, $3,000; event development, $6,000; upgrade the travel display, $4,000; production of a video, $4,000; development of taped tours, $1,000; convention development, $3,500; additional targeted distribution of information, $3,500; and an editorial liaison for travel writer development, $2,500; and an $800 contingency fund.

"It is a good solid marketing approach based on what has worked in the past, while pushing forward with new ideas for the '90s," Hagerman said of the Chamber's plans. "Now is the time to keep moving forward. The uncertainties of international travel affects not only the people in Toronto, but those just south of the border as well.

"Haliburton County offers an accessible, friendly and environmentally attractive place to visit and invest. The potential to attract people and events here is great. We must continue to make our area know or else other areas will surpass us."

The county will consider the Chamber's request in its upcoming budget deliberations.

tion date is hoped for.

As well, Club 35 Hall's Lake will get $83,340 to construct an addition to its hall and to make all facilities accessible. The addition will include a new kitchen and washrooms.

"A healthy lifestyle with regular recreation and sports activity will boost everyone's well-being," said Minister Peter North in a press release announcing the grants.

Another provincial grant will go to Lutterworth Township, this one for $26,000 from the Ministry of the Environment to upgrade landfill facilities. It has already been spent on a hydrogeological study on part of the former Deep Bay Road site.

The federal government is chipping in $12,024 to the Stanhope Senior Social Club to assist in its recreational and social programs. The New Horizons grant will be spent on line and square dancing, as well as new crafts programs for the benefit of retirees and interested persons.

Lakes will be sprayed

Plans for this spring's spray program against a Gypsy moth infestation are being hindered by neighbours of people who want to get their land sprayed.

Co-ordinator Len Munt is having difficulties reaching people whose land abuts that of those who have applied to have their land sprayed. Approval is necessary and as well, a minimum block of 10 acres is needed for spraying to proceed.

The program is jointly funded by the Ministry of Natural Resources and the county, and uses a naturally-occurring pesticide called Bt. When ingested, it kills only moths and not other creatures such as birds.

The lakes to be sprayed this spring are Gull, Davis, Bow, Conseau, Mountain, Horseshoe, Little Boshkung and Twelve Mile.

Michael Collins remembers Eugene Forsey

Forever a true socialist

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Canada has "lost a giant" with the passing of Eugene Forsey, says a man who once almost became the constitutional expert and senator's brother-in-law.

"He was one of the last of the giants; he was about the last of the true Shavian socialists," says H. Michael Collins, who is "very, very sad my sister didn't marry him."

"We need someone to stand above the crowd and tell us all the mistakes we've made. . . I don't see any giants left. We've come a long way down the ladder."

Mr. Forsey died last Friday. As Jack Kapica of the Globe and Mail said, perhaps summing up the feelings of many Canadians entering into yet another stage of a constitutional crisis, "Canada needs Eugene Forsey more than God does."

Born in Newfoundland, Mr.

Forsey's father died when he was six months old and he lived with his maternal grandparents and mother in Ottawa. His grandfather was a leading authority in parliamentary procedure and young Eugene spent much of his youth on Parliament Hill.

Although his family was staunchly Conservative, and Mr. Forsey was good friends with Conservative Prime Minister Arthur Meighen, his years as a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University transformed him into an ardent socialist. (One of his teachers at McGill University was economist and humourist Stephen Leacock.)

Together with Rev. James Woodsworth and Tommy Douglas, Mr. Forsey was a founder of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, which was the forerunner of the New Democratic Party. Dismayed by the NDP's rejection of the ideals of socialism, Mr. Forsey had no qualms in becoming a senator under Liberal Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau. He was also well known as a witty and scathing writer of many letters to the editor. In 1990, he published A Life on the Fringe: Memoirs of Eugene Forsey.

Mr. Collins, who now lives in Gooderham and has been known to write a few letters to the editor himself, met Mr. Forsey when both were living in Ottawa.

"He was really serious about trying to get my sister Isobel to marry him," says Mr. Collins, who was 11 or 12 when Mr. Forsey began his year-long courtship. "He was a very earnest socialist and my father, who was an earnest Conservative, had problems with that and my sister was apolitical. He couldn't break through her unwillingness to get involved. He attempted to convince her with his logic but if he had swept her off her feet and taken her out to dances, he probably would have won."

"He was a man who needed very badly not only the respect of others but someone who could care for him."

Isobel Collins might not have been impressed with the inspired tales of socialism's potential, but her younger brother certainly was. Michael Collins would listen in rapt interest.

"I sat and listened to him and I was totally impressed. He and Agnes McPhail were the two people who influenced me the most in my thinking. . .

"In the Depression, he felt there was a chance for the breakdown of the old system. That was the window of opportunity because people were so desperate. They could see where the old system had failed," says Mr. Collins, who in his youth helped organized Ontario's CCF party and met Mr. Forsey at

WEATHER WATCH

Sap may run soon

The sap should soon be running as Haliburton County continues on its path towards spring.

"It will be pretty benign," says weather watcher Jim Elstone. "This week's weather should be running at or close to normal which is a maximum of -1 in the daytime and a low of -12 at night."

"We're getting close to sap season — another week or two."

There will probably be snow on Friday night as a weather system moves north from California — which will finally get rain, but "it won't do anything more than dampen the dust. Travelling east to northeast, it will just brush us with some snow Friday night into Saturday."

Last week's warm weather reduced some snow cover but there's still lots left. In the northern half of the county, it's 45 cm, 35 cm in Haliburton Village, and 15 cm in the south. As the snow melted, however, the ice thickened and is now 18 to 20 inches deep.

Haliburtonians enjoyed mid-week temperatures of 5 degrees, although it did fall to -8 on Saturday. On Sunday and Monday it was just .5 degrees below zero.

Weather trivia: With all the burning oil wells in Kuwait, the rain falling in that region is an oily black, and "most of that is drifting into Iran. For most of last week, the daytime temperatures were 15 degrees."

The coldest spot in the world was Kyusur, Siberia with -61, while in Marree, Australia, they suffered through 43 degree temperatures.

On February 27, 1717 — "just a little later than yesterday" — the depth of snow in Boston was 91 cm. (There wouldn't be any snow there now.) Moving north along the eastern seaboard, snow was 150 cm deep in Maine. Because Canada did not have official weather records in those days, we're not sure how deep the snow was in Haliburton.

A PIE IN YOUR FACE: Ryan Timbers downs a blueberry pie in an attempt to win HHSS's annual Spirit Week eating contest. Before the pie, Ryan and winner Jaime Dollo ate a plate full of beans and whipped cream. Yum.

Pass the Bromo Seltzer...

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

WHO COULD BELIEVE they'd eat the whoooooole thing?

Time and Alka Seltzer were of the essence for at least 15 high school students who were (brave?) enough to compete in Haliburton Highland Secondary School's food eating contest Thursday.

In the spirit of HHSS's annual winter carnival, the food "connoisseurs" proudly donned garbage bags to enjoy their feast, a plate of pork and beans topped with whipped cream.

Using nothing but their mouths and the advice of a blind-folded companion grasping the plate, the competitors had to devour everything on their plate in the fastest possible time.

Within seconds of the start, the first group of nibblers easily accomplished this task by continuously mashing their faces over and over into the cream and beans, quickly turning the fare into a brown heaping mound of goo. All the while, cries of "I'm going to be sick," could be heard among members of the audience who came to witness this culinary spectacle.

After the second group of munchers finished their beans, the winning eaters from each heat squared off to see who could consume a whole blueberry pie, covered in whipped cream.

The crowd was both amazed and nauseated as Jaime Dollo and Ryan Timbers went at it mouthful to mouthful, buried face deep in their pie plates. With the expert guidance of Craig Bain, Dollo walked away the winner leaving Timbers and his assistant Greg Sisson a close second.

I wonder what's on the menu for next year?

CHACE needs more space, more kids

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The Minden CHACE Resource Centre needs more space and the Haliburton CHACE needs more kids — and now CHACE has a better idea of how to achieve both goals.

After an intensive and invigorating week-long analysis of its operations, the staff and board members of the child resource agency have identified their challenges, priorities and action plans.

First on the list is finding a new home for the Minden centre, which often sees 80 people pass through its main street doors on weekdays.

The centre's lease expires in May and there is an application underway for funds to renovate another building.

Once that problem is solved, more children must be attracted to the Haliburton location, which has had a run of bad luck: it had to live its village location, there was a wrongful dismissal suit by an employee (which the agency won) and a fire closed the centre for a few months. However, in the past year there was a 59 per cent increase in visitors for a total of 5,847. (There were 13,006 users of the Minden centre.)

"We know we have to get back into town," says Administrator

Rules of the road

*I think that I shall never see
A billboard as lovely as a tree
Indeed, unless the billboards fall
I'll never see a tree at all*

Ogden Nash

Haliburton County's roads may not look as bad as the crazy kaleidoscope of city streets, but we do have a sign problem. With no rules or guidelines, any type of sign of any size was being put up anywhere. Rules are enforced along the highways, but on county and municipal roads, it was more or less "let it be."

Until last year when the county began enforcing its 1986 by-laws. Some businesses were up in arms, some justifiably, but others in total disregard of the main principle behind the rules: our roads need to be safe. When you're negotiating a sharp turn, your eye should not be distracted by a large sign. Those rustic country roads aren't rustic as a car rounds a corner at 80 kmh, only to find a car stopped at a junction as the driver searches for a name amongst the ragtag collection of name signs nailed to a tree.

Nor was it pleasant to finally arrive in Haliburton, leaving the stresses of the city behind, only to be bombarded by posters advertising everything from massages to septic cleaning. As the roads engineer said, people come up here because of the trees and lakes and they can't see those trees for all the signs. Ogden Nash may have made the point more poetically, but it's still a valid one.

The new by-law, which was passed by county council Wednesday, does not forbid signs on county roads. Instead, it says certain guidelines must be followed — where the sign can be placed, how large it can be, and when it must be removed if the business no longer exists. It may seem like another instance of bureaucratic meddling, but it makes sense. Businesses aren't being stopped from advertising, but they are being asked to keep others' interests in mind as well.

Pet peeve

Perhaps it's not fair to call this a pet peeve, but it is a frustration: the confusion between a township and a municipality. They are different words and mean different things, even though in this county at least, they are sometimes also one and the same.

Let's use the municipality of Dysart et al as an example. The full name is the United Townships of Dysart, Dudley, Harcourt, Guilford, Harburn, Bruton, Havelock, Eyre and Clyde. Each of those nine names represents a township, which is a geographic description of a piece of land, and each is roughly the same size. When they formed together into a political body, they became a municipality. So there's a township of Dysart (Haliburton Village) and a municipality of Dysart et al. Likewise, you can't call the political body of Anson, Hindon and Minden a township. Separately they are townships; together they are a municipality.

Altogether there are 10 municipalities and 23 townships in the county (which is the next highest step in political and geographic boundaries, followed by region, province and country.) Some of those townships stand on their own, such as Glamorgan, Snowdon and Stanhope. In those cases, the township is also the municipality, or the governing body.

Last summer, it was hard enough to get the summer reporters not to refer to Haliburton as "the city." City means something, just as hamlet, village and town mean something different.

City or village, township or municipality, it may be a mute point but there is method in the madness. And as could be said of the country on the whole, we should learn to respect their differences. M.P.

MNR's view is hypocritical

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUR READERS WRITE...

To the Editor:

I am responding to the MNR's concerns about loose dogs. Aside from the article making me sick with its hypocritical absurdity, let me point out some facts about MNR and their beloved deer. Firstly, MNR supports the massive slaughtering of deer through a so-called "sport" — hunting. Humans (mostly men) take the opportunity to roam and participate in the thrill of a deer chase which results in death or maiming. If the deer is maimed, and not killed, it is vulnerable to every type of harassment — civil or natural. Clearly, their intentions of protecting the deer is to ensure that they stay in the area of revenue. That is, anything that is associated with deer murdering guns and hunting licenses, uphold a system designed for profit only.

Furthermore, the MNR feels completely justified in man's control over the environment and does not even begin to consider nature's control over the environment.

Moreover, the MNR upholds the massive slaughtering of natural animals through a cruel and inhumane method called trapping. Last year (according to MNR revenue estimates) 11 million wildlife animals, in Canada alone, fell victim to these merciless snares and traps. Furthermore, we are told by the MNR that this massive slaughtering is necessary to keep the populations down. What a bunch of hogwash!

As previously mentioned, nature is quite capable of taking care of itself without the interference of "man". Just look around us — the destruction of our natural environment is due to man's control over the environment and until we start changing our attitudes and moral responsibility to other living creatures our problems will continue. At this point in time, a more accurate name for the MNR is the MND — Ministry of Natural Destruction!

Off-the-cuff comment is a dangerous one

To The Editor:

Recently, Vice President Quayle, in an off-hand comment during an interview, mentioned the possible use of atomic weapons in the Iraq war. He did not specify at what point the Americans would consider the use of such methods, but the very fact that he was willing to mention it at all publicly says a lot for the mind-set of the present American ad-

Bob is like David

To the Editor:

Premier Bob has certainly been quick in taking over Peterson's Policy: "If you don't intend to fund it, order another study."

I doubt that we will ever see the needed expansion of the Haliburton sewage plant nor the extension of the lines to our important resorts.

CREIGHTON FEIR

FOR SOME PEOPLE THEY say that life begins at 40. This being the case that time has arrived for Paul Wilson (better known as "The Beaver"). Twenty-four of his close friends were on hand at Lochaven Inn, Maple Lake on Saturday evening to help him celebrate the occasion. Paul, who turned 40 recently, was the recipient of many gifts, some of which he'll treasure for years to come. Happy birthday "Beaver" and may you have many more.

The Sunday Supper Club will be meeting this coming Sunday, March 3, at 5:00 p.m. at the West Guilford Community Centre. A games night will follow the supper with cards, games and so on. If you are interested in attending, call Nancy Brink at her business number 457-2222 or at home 754-2516.

On Friday, February 22 a birth certificate was found outside of Stedman's Store in Haliburton. The certificate is in our possession at the Echo office. If the owner Maria Magdolna Laczko gets in touch with us here, we will see that it is returned to her.

We have been hearing several complaints from snowmobilers that the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association trails this winter left great deal to be desired. Some snowmobilers can't understand how the Association would have the nerve to charge a trail fee on rough trails such as these. Another man told me that he went out with a group and the trails were so rough that they decided to turn around and come on back home while they still had their backs intact. Another person told me that if they don't soon start to groom these trails in a proper manner that some local worlds largest snowmobile club would turn in to be the smallest. The trails are well groomed at the Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve but we are sorry to say this isn't the case on the Haliburton County Snowmobile trails. The talking should be over and it's time for action.

From time to time we hear some gruesome tales about snowmobilers, who, through lack of knowledge of the area, or by just plain showing off, continue to drive their machines close to open water. The Haliburton County Snowmobile Association is always informing us that too many snowmobilers were injured or killed in open water accidents in this province last year and the same trend seems to be continuing this year. The Association in past newsletters have reminded all snowmobilers that this is unforgivable behaviour with all the information that is available to us here in the Highlands of Haliburton. Snowmobilers are also reminded to please check ice conditions and lake routes carefully if you must travel on them.

Now you can sit through the hockey playoff games at the arena in Haliburton in solid comfort. New propane heaters were installed above the seats in January. This added addition should bring out more young and old fans to the activities that will take place in the arena.

Cassandra Wyszowski will be the guest speaker at the World Day of Prayer Service which will be held at the Haliburton United Church on Friday, March 1, at 7:30 p.m. Theme is "On the Journey Together". Everyone is invited to attend.

In speaking with Sylvia Holland of the Haliburton BIA, she told me that next year they are hoping to get all the organizations in Haliburton involved in the Haliburton Winter Carnival under the direction of the BIA. Many people are coming forward with constructive ideas for next year's big winter event and many of them will be on the program for 1992. I think that now is the time to consider possibly bringing back the torchlight parade for Friday evening, parade on Saturday, fireworks, outdoor arena at the fair grounds, bed races and so on. If you have some ideas please send them in to Sylvia.

Here, there and everywhere. . . Ev and Marcel Dennis of Mike's Milk at Haliburton returned home last week following a vacation at Fort Myers, Florida. . . Friends of Phyllis Pearsell of Haliburton will be sorry to learn of her death which occurred last Friday. . . We are sorry to report that Briar Conebeare fell and broke his leg recently. . . Alex Lopez, who is no stranger to the citizens of Haliburton, gave a very interesting and though-provoking talk to the members of the Rotary Club of Haliburton last Thursday night. . . Sorry to report the death of longtime Haliburton resident Reg Sproats. . . Susan (Peel) and Randy MacDonald are home from Sydney, Australia with their daughter Freyja, visiting with Barb and John Peel on Skyline Park.

In closing this week I am wondering along with many other local citizens if we are ever going to see a new bridge to replace the old one at Head Lake Park.

POINTS OF VIEW

TRAVELLING THROUGH the U.S.A. in a motorhome, staying in campgrounds, means that we get a slanted view of the country, I'm sure. I don't think I am any more capable of defining this country as I pass through than the occasional American who arrives in Haliburton in August with skis on the top of his car could accurately describe our area.

At the same time, being me, I do keep an eye on the more offbeat side of life, and there is certainly a lot to see in this particular country. Some things could probably happen in Canada if we know where to look, but some seem to be very American.

Want a crossover? Well, the national newspaper here, 'USA Today,' carries full page ads with 'A special invitation to all Americans' to join U.S. English — and claims 400,000 members who are dedicated to "a nationwide effort to preserve our common language, a precious heritage we all share."

Their concern? English has never been declared the official language of the country, and they feel the nation's unity is being threatened by a growing movement towards bilingualism, in this case Spanish. They don't want the U.S. "torn apart by language differences, like Canada or India."

In case you think this is some redneck outfit, the ad is signed by the famous semanticist and Senator S.I. Hayakawa, former ambassador to the U.K., Walter Annenberg, Alistair Cooke of PBS fame, and many others. But any Canadian can relate to this cause — one way or the other — I'm sure.

On the other hand, while we do have problems with it, vandalism seems to have risen to new heights over here. Yes, there is graffiti to be seen around Toronto, and who can forget the problems keeping flags flying in Haliburton a few years ago.

While travelling in California, we saw convict crews out washing graffiti off of highway overpasses. And while we were there, we also saw a TV news story on how some artist's officially commissioned wall mural had been accidentally erased by one of these crews. Hey, everybody's a critic, right?

The future generation of public artists may be 12 and under, because starting at the first of 1991, anyone over the age of 13 convicted of graffiti vandalism will have their driving privileges suspended for a year. Spray paint and felt-tip marker pens now carry a special state tax to fund graffiti cleanup.

The money may come in handy to clear up the work of a "tagger" as they call them, who tags himself CHAKA. His real name is Daniel Ramos, an 18-year-old product of the housing projects who, neighbors say, went out late each night on his skateboard with a knapsack full of spraypaint cans on his back.

Captured just before Christmas, Ramos had written his 'Chaka' tag over 10,000 times in Los Angeles and Orange County, and had defaced more than $500,000 in property from there to San Francisco before they caught him in the act, writing on a traffic light pole in Lincoln Heights.

Terrible, yes, but it is hard to properly relate it to the mentality of the yahoos who tried to cut down the largest, oldest Sequoias in their national park a few years back — or last year's vandalism scandal in Yellowstone National Park.

In November, officials found vandals had battered at least a half-dozen of the geysers and hot springs that are the "stars" of Yellowstone — and which had led to the creation of the country's first national park over 70 years ago by President Theodore Roosevelt.

These irreplaceable treasures of nature were damaged by people who tried to plug a geyser by rolling a boulder into its steam vent, then kicked and trampled the crater rim of another. The cutback in federal parks budgets had cut back on patrols in the area, and the damage went undetected for several weeks.

On a less serious note, and perhaps a trend we'll see up home, is the flagrant refusal by many merchants down here of the coin of the country — if it's a penny!

And apparently, while the one cent coin is legal tender, the Office of the Counsel of the U.S. Mint admits that a private entity can establish terms of payment. In other words, whether they refuse to take $50 bills or pennies, a store or a newspaper vendor can refuse to take a penny.

In fact, a survey has found that 13 percent of U.S. teenagers don't let pennies burn holes in their pockets. They don't put them in their piggy banks either. They chuck 'em in the garbage!

Maybe it's time for another real depression after all.

PIC OF THE PAST

This week's Pic of the Past takes us back to the time when the railway was running into Haliburton. In this photo the train can be seen making its daily run from Lindsay and rounding the bend coming into the second crossing near the high school, then on to the station at Haliburton. The photo submitted by Vera Watson of Scarborough Ontario was taken in 1936.

Society needs Mr. Rowbothams

THROUGH THE PERISCOPE

MARTHA PERKINS

Clarence Rowbotham, not just Clarence or Rowbotham, because both names seem part of his personality.) Writing a story about him was one I couldn't pass up, yet at the same time, I had to tread carefully.

How do you write a story about a man everyone laughs at, though not (usually) out of spite or meanness or ignorance? He may not make Nashville with his country and western act, but he so earnestly believes in his talents, you have to give him his due. Whatever else you can say about his singing, you can't deny he puts his whole heart into it. He's become a fixture at local fairs, and it's not just with benign tolerance officials allow him to take part. Truth is, the crowds really get a kick out of his act.

There's a deep regard for Mr. Rowbotham. Perhaps with all our attempts to get ahead, to improve our lot in life, he reminds us that people don't have to be perfect to have a role to fill in our society. In all his attempts to act and sing like his heroes, Mr. Rowbotham is magically still being true to himself. His ability to create a persona, one which gives him happiness and allows him to transcend this mortal coil, runs so deep, it's become a part of him.

So you have to read between the lines of the profile of Mr. Rowbotham, because as readers and as a writer we have to respect Mr. Rowbotham's integrity. This isn't a world where everyone can fit into an a clean, neat and uniform image. As a society, we can't demand it, and as a community, we should not want it. And what would the community be like without Clarence Rowbotham, and his like? A lot less colourful, that's for sure. He's one of the people who make Haliburton what it is, and we should be glad Nashville hasn't come a calling.

Roof shovelling made easy

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

HE SWORE LAST YEAR would be the last. But when fall rolled around and the memory had faded, he had agreed to take on the job again. She knew he would.

Shovelling roofs. Throughout the winter he kept an eye on the roofs for which he was responsible. Like the people who owned them, not all roofs were the same. The flatter, more docile roof had to be watched carefully for snow could build up quickly on its surface. The assertive, high peaked roof could take more snow, some of it even sliding cooperatively down the roof's sides. But when the time came to lighten its load, a person had to be a bit of a mountain climber. Aggressive roofs that thrust out into the winds off the lake were usually clear on that lake side but carrying an extra load on the other. Intellectual roofs with their complicated series of peaks and valleys were the curse of a roof shoveller. Snow gathered in these gulleys and a person had to wade in waist deep.

This was her second year accompanying him on his roof rounds and while such philosophical musings may have seemed somewhat out of place for the occasion, she had seen the variety that awaited them. And although she did only about a quarter of the work that he did, she fully appreciated what had to be contended with. Besides, a glorious morning like this encouraged philosophical ramblings of the mind. It forced a person to stop and look around at the beauty arrayed for the observer's enjoyment. This freed the mind of such weighty thoughts as war, poverty and next week's grocery list, encouraging it instead to dwell on the essence of human nature and how it could best mesh with the natural world that surrounded it.

He had parked the truck at the end of the driveway, to avoid any problem getting back out later, and the two of them started walking toward the cottage, the snow scoops dragging behind. Not a cloud marred the cold and distant blue of the sky. Blue jays and ravens crisscrossed between the trees above their heads, their raucous cries breaking the silence like glass shattering on rock. Last night's snow fall had appointed this as the day to start on the roofs. Any further delay would be too risky.

She could see where deer had crossed by the back of the garage, breaking a soft path through the fresh snow. A rabbit had dented the white surface in a regular, almost too perfect pattern and something smaller, perhaps a mouse, had skittered over the surface in tiny hasty scramblings that looked like seeds scattered about.

They passed evergreen branches stopped over with the new weight and both looked automatically up to the cottage roof. Smooth and undisturbed, the roof calmly turned its face to the blue sky, unmindful that it was being inspected, evaluated. As they ran their eyes over its surface to the side, the true picture emerged. A two foot thick coating followed the contour of the roof, looking like the meringue topping on a slice of lemon meringue pie. They each unconsciously flexed and straightened their shoulders, limbering for the task at hand. A ladder stood pressed against the side of the cottage, its rungs hidden beneath a build-up of snow. Obviously no foot had trod those rungs since the eaves were cleaned out in the late fall.

As they passed what in the summer was a bed of petunias, the snow beside them exploded with a flurry of beating wings. Their unexpected passing had disturbed a partridge buried in the snow. With awkward effort it became air borne and wheeled around to settle on a branch near the cottage. If they hadn't seen it land on that spot, they might very well have never noticed it perched against the white and brown-grey background.

He climbed the ladder first and she passed both scoops up to him, one at a time, then climbing up herself. They each chose opposite ends of the roof and dug their scoops in. This initial plunge told them what kind of a job lay ahead. If the snow was crusty and clinging to the roof, they were faced with a lot of hard shovelling. But to their relief, the scoops sunk easily into the light snow and they were able to lift out huge, satisfying loads to dump over the edge. Getting started was always the annoying part of the job as each hacked out a cleared spot which would then allow room to manoeuvre the scoop. Once this was accomplished, a rhythm developed of scoop down, lift, pivot, slide and empty.

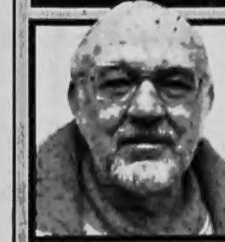

The trick was to let the weight of the snow in the scoop and the incline of the roof do the work for you, rather than pulling or dragging the heavy burden from place to place. It was work, no doubt about that, but done the right way took half the time and used half the exertion. Since this was her second year, she got the hang of it once again quickly. Last year it had taken much longer to master the pivot and slide. She had gone home with aching muscles and a hatred of winter that took days to shake.

As they worked toward the centre of the roof from their opposite ends, the partridge stayed on the tree branch, not far from where they stood. Its head bobbed and twisted on the flexible little neck, watching them, unsure whether to stay or go. Perhaps the warmth of the February sun caused it to linger longer than it would have otherwise. She could feel her t-shirt becoming damp under the sweatshirt. Her jacket over that felt as though it was locking in a furnace of heat and she stopped for a minute to open its zipper. It was so tempting to take the jacket right off but she knew that was almost guaranteed to result in a cold by tomorrow.

Strength is found everywhere

AS OTHERS SEE IT

BOB GIULIANO

IT SEEMS LIKE a long time since I've had the stuff to keep up with this column. It has often been on my mind but I could not find what it takes to write. I'm mostly a "gut-and-gush" kind of writer. When the gut is in turmoil there isn't any gush!

I've missed being a part of The Echo. I picked one up today and found myself lonesome to be in touch again. It's a good paper, written by good folks. I like being a small part of that labour of ideals and vision.

It's been a tough winter. When the going gets tough, I'm a weenie, a wimp. I whine. It's the only way. Like Job, I summon God to court. I accuse God. Who else? "A person has a right before God," Job said; "a right to know why all this trouble!" I've been a good guy. I can list my endearing traits and I can give you an eight-page resume of charitable works.

God seems to sit by my side, quietly, waiting, sometimes helping me complain by reminding me of good works I'd forgotten to mention.

When you are scared you imagine terrible things. The future seems impossible. But when you are in the midst of the ache and the reality of what is, there are resources you hadn't counted on.

I kept recalling folks in my churches who had one trial and tragedy after another. Trouble mounted into catastrophe. Just when they thought they could relax, some further heart-rending event brought them to their knees again. Somehow these folks just kept plodding on, one step, one day at a time. The memory of their endurance kept my troubles in perspective. The memory of their faith gave me the dignity. To be human is to suffer. That's all. No exemptions. No age limits. No moral prevention. Everyone walks the walk of the intrusion of some suffering. That's human life. It's all a matter of luck, the Hebrew Bible says, of chance. Another resource of strength is the gathering around of family and friends. My sons grew up over night. They took care of their dad. Put their arms around both mom and dad. Became responsible instantly. It felt good. They love us after all.

Friends arrived or phoned or wrote. Folks from near and far prayed for us. I didn't have a prayer. It was like being carried in loving arms to be prayed for. It kept hopes high and helped to sleep and to rest and to heal. Folks who had walked this way before testified to their hope and life.

Kind, practical doctors and nurses, humble and truthful made the journey of belonging to the human family rich and eased the sense of helplessness.

In the midst of the darkest hours we were bathed in a warm and assuring light. I laughed, went outside to see if the whole house glowed in the winter night. We laughed some more, and held each other trying to remember words of scripture, but they wouldn't come. The light was so natural everything was visible to both the eyes and the heart. Eternity is real.

God sent angels to announce a new beginning. Strange folks with a word from the Lord, not the ones you'd expect, or the word you would expect. Just when you need it, in walks the unexpected one with the unexpected word. Unexpected strength is given.

Life is never the same again.

HE SHOOTS, HE SCORES? The Haliburton Tri-County Novices hosted a tournament on the weekend. Teams from Minden, Bobcaygeon, Port Perry and Sunderland took part. Here one of the Huskie Novices exhibits his shooting skills against a player from Port Perry. Unfortunately, Port Perry went on to win the game, 8 to 1.

Novice Huskies find worthwhile opponents in Bracebridge's bears

The OMHA Nicholls Novice Huskies, having defeated Beaverton to advance to the next playoff round, have been biding their time and looking for some competition. It came in the form of the Bracebridge Bears, the pride of the Muskoka. The Bears have had a very successful season and were anxious to meet the small but mighty team from the Highlands. The two squads squared off in Haliburton on Sunday.

In the first period the Huskies carried the play to the Bears but the Bears held them off while getting a feel for their opposition. The first ended in a scoreless tie. In the second period the Bears got untracked and made the most of their opportunities to head into the third leading the Huskies by a score of 2-0. The Huskies kept skating and trying. Greg Forgrave put them on the scoreboard when a Bears defenceman misplayed the puck. Greg stole it at their blueline and walked in alone on the Bracebridge net flipping the puck past the goalie. Later, while playing shorthanded, the Huskies scored again on a break-out play from their own end when Kenny Ablett skated in on the Bears net and managed to put the puck high into the mesh, not over the net. The two evenly matched teams kept up the pressure but the game ended in a friendly sister-kisser. In summary, it was a well-played game by two good Novice hockey teams.

HHSS nordic skiers out-ski Lakefield in the final race

Haliburton high school nordic skiers once again showed their dominance of Midget events when Lakefield College hosted the final race of the season on Haliburton trails last Wednesday.

In the Midget boys event, Mike Ellis placed first, Simon Reid finished second and Chris Crane was third. Lisa Ranson placed third in the Midget girls event.

Ryan Cummings competed in the Junior boys event even though he is of Midget age, to gain experience against a higher level of competition. Coaches Bruce Griffith and Sharon Diblee were hoping he would place in the top 10, but he did much better than that, skiing to an impressive third place finish. Kelly Heyes placed eighth overall in a very competitive senior girls event.

Richard Whiten led the senior boys team of Dave Watson and Chris Holliday-Rhodes, while Ron Reid and Rudy Edwards supported Ryan Cummings for a strong junior boys finish.

The HHSS Nordic Ski team coaches encourage everyone to support these fine young athletes as they strive to become a powerhouse in Ontario Secondary School Nordic skiing.

Series ends with bang as PeeWees advance

Deseronto arrived in Haliburton for Game 3 of their OMHA series on Saturday February 23. Haliburton jumped out of the gate quickly with two early goals. Jon Hebert scored from Tim Keefer and Tim Keefer scored with assists going to Jon Hebert and Derek Glendinning. Deseronto tied the score before the first period ended on goals by Jessie Wonsborough and Brian Brant. The lone goal in the second period was an unassisted effort by Derek Glendinning. Tim Keefer replied just minutes later with another solo effort. Brian Brant made the score close for Deseronto before Tim Keefer connected again from Derek Glendinning and Jackie Morrison. The game ended with Haliburton recording a 5-3 win.

Sunday's game did not begin on such a positive note. Edmund Dowling scored for Deseronto at 10:21 of the first period. Haliburton replied with two goals in the second period by Jackie Morrison. Tim Keefer and Curtis Reynolds picked up assists. The third period belonged to Haliburton. Derek Glendinning scored first from Curtis Bain. Then Glendinning tallied again from Jon Hebert and Tim Keefer. Tim Stouffer rounded out the scoring as Tim Keefer picked up his fourth assist of the game. The Haliburton defence played extremely well as Matt Galbraith, Curtis Bain, Tim Stouffer and Curtis Reynolds moved the puck quickly out of their own end. Mike Hartwick delivered some excellent body checks while Jim O'Neill proved once again that he is one of the best penalty killers in PeeWee hockey. Rene Gagnon worked very hard in spot duty and proved his value as a player who puts the team first. Brock Glendinning played well in the Haliburton net.

Haliburton now advances to the quarter finals against Wasaga Beach. The series will begin next weekend. Details have yet to be arranged.

Player's goals are historic

If there was a Guinness Book of Hockey Records, Minden's Todd Redgrave might merit a paragraph or two in it. At the very least, the feat he performed last Tuesday night has become a piece of local hockey lore.

The Minden Tri County PeeWees were playing their fourth round robin playoff game, facing Beaverton. In the second period Redgrave notched a goal, with help from Bobbi Griffin. Just six seconds later, Redgrave scored again, and once again Griffin got the assist. If these were not the fastest two goals ever scored by one player, the fact that the same player assisted on both added an extra twist that made the feat unique.

Not content with two goals in the period, Redgrave scored again with 16 seconds left to complete a second period hat trick. It was his fourth goal of the game, and his 43 of the season.

The Monarchs ended up on the winning end of a 9-4 score.

At Sir Sam's on Saturday, Florajean Phillips signs in Shirley Rapson, who was one of the 18 downhill enthusiasts who helped to raise $1100 in Ski for Heart. Rev. John Phillips was the top pledge earner for the Heart and Stroke Foundation, bringing in approximately $400.

Final showdown is set to go

THIS WEEK IN THE M.H.L.

by: CHIP TRUEMAN

WITH THEIR WIN on Sunday night, Vasey Insurance have got their playoff spot locked up tighter than the Kingston Pen. Six straight wins have guaranteed them a first place finish. They will now go on to play Curry Motors in a three game series to decide the league championship. It was Haliburton Lumber "taking it on the chin" against the brokers this week. Final score was 12-2. Bernie Upton, Dan Ambridge, Kevin Phillips, Willie Greber, Carl Rowbotham and John Little scored for Vasey Insurance. Haliburton Lumber's duece was the work of Ron Yake and Gregory Carpenter.

Youngdale Fuel's hope of a spot in the finals was crushed as Roberts-Austin Fuels defeated the oilmen 10-6. An early evening fire call left Youngdale's a little short in the player department, but it is good to see that Haliburton's V.F.F. have got their priorities straight. Scoring for the winning side were Steve Roberts, Erin Nichols, Rod Sisson, Wade MacIness, Phil Barry, Chris Nelthorpe and "NEW DAD" Woodcock. Congratulations Bob to both you and Robin! Goal getters for Youngdale's included Tim Davies, Roger Bain, Peter Fearrey and TIM CHAMBERS with yet another hat trick! What's your secret, dude???

Emmerson Lumber wasn't about to let Curry Motors finish their playoff "sched" easily. As a matter of fact, the lumbermen had Curry's sweating a bit. With only eight minutes left in the game Emmersons were ahead 4-2. It looked as though an upset was in the making until Chris Hodgson turned on the after burners, netting two in a row to tie the game. That tie clinched Curry Motors' spot in the championship series. Hodgson ended up with a hat trick; Andy Salvatori scored the other. Emmerson Lumber goals came from Rob Abbs, Brian Mulholland, Rick Rutting and Roy Scott. Excellent hockey!

In other action, Bishop and Wilson continued their "forfeiting" ways as they gave up another one this week, losing by default to Elstone Motors. In past weeks I always thought lack of interest was the main reason for B&W's poor player turnout, but on Sunday night the truth finally dawned on me. Most of the surveyors were simply frightened. That must be it. Bishop and Wilson were afraid of losing the high flying, quick scoring Motors of Elstone. Hey that has a real ring to it — the Motors of Elstone. Just think Dave, with a name like that, if things don't work out for you in the car biz you could always open a hair salon.

So hockey hounds, the stage is set. Vasey Insurance and Curry Motors. Best of three. Any predictions? I know it will be close, but I am taking the brokers two games to one. Come on out and watch. This will truly be hockey at it's best! I'm Chip and that was THIS WEEK IN THE M.H.L.

Haliburton club skaters do well at Interclub '91

by KAREN TURNER

On Sunday, February 17, members of the Haliburton Skating Club attended the Kawartha Highlands Interclub held in Lakefield. Each club in our region sent some of its best skaters to compete in Freeskate, Dance, interpretive and Artistic categories. This year was a particularly good year for our club as we sent one of the biggest and strongest teams in the past few years. Each and every skater did a wonderful job representing our club. Although not all skaters received medals in the finals, they should feel very proud of their accomplishments.

The following are results of the day. Placings are for Figure, Freeskate, Flight and Final.

Atoms win series' 8th game

Haliburton's Tri-County Atoms have now completed eight of the 12 games in their round-robin semi-finals. To date their record is eight wins, including five shut-outs for their goalie Andrew Baker.

February 16 saw them in their first match with Lakefield. The game proceeded through a scoreless first period. Early in the second an unassisted goal by Sean Irvine put Haliburton on the score board. Entering the third, Haliburton only lead by one goal. Then they let loose. Goals came from Neil Paul, Jason Henry with and Matthew Thompson. Assisting were Dan Clark and Luke Cowan. This took Haliburton to a 5-0 victory over Lakefield.

Two nights later the team played its second game in the series against Bobcaygeon. Goals came fast for Haliburton in the first period. By its end Haliburton lead by five goals. They continued the scoring into the second and third periods, giving them a 8-0 victory over Bobcaygeon. Goals in the game came from Sean Irvine (2), Luke Cowan (2), Matthew Thompson, Jason Henry, Amy Wood and Brett Wilson. Assisting in the scoring were Kevin Harrison and Neil Paul.

Friday of the same week the team travelled to Warsaw for the return match in the series. This was probably one of their closest fought victories with only scoring in the game being an unassisted goal by Sean Irvine. The second game of the week-end saw them battle Manvers in both teams' first encounter with one another. Scoring were Sean Irvine, Jason Henry, Brett Wilson, with assists from Kevin Harrison and Amy Wood, giving the team a 3-0 victory.

Sunday February 24 saw the return of Lakefield. It was evident that Lakefield was out to better their effort compared with the first meeting of these two teams, and they did. The game was a very hard-

Kennisis Poker Run becoming big event

The Haliburton Forest Poker Run is fast on its way to becoming the largest snowmobiling events in the county — and the province.

On Saturday, Feb. 16, 312 riders gathered at the Boiler Room to begin the trek across the Forest's 300 kilometres of trails. And in the process, they raised $2,000 for the Haliburton Hospital.

"The conditions were excellent," says the Forest's Peter Schleifenbaum. "Sure it was cold, but that makes the trails stay up better."

At each stop, riders were given a feast of pancakes and maple syrup. As well, there were draws for 150 prizes donated by local businesses. The grand prize winner of a 1991 Polaris snowmobile was Helen Doomernik of Scarborough.

Sponsored by the Haliburton Forest, Kennisis Lake Business Community, Backwoods Marina, Kennisis Lake Marina, Kennisis Lake Lodge and Windermere Cottage Resort, the poker run is attracting more participants each year. Two years ago there were 220 participants, 270 came last year, and this year, even with the Haliburton Winter Carnival's snowmobile events, there were 312 riders.

Sue Valm. When the centre moved to the Highway 121 former church, "it was the best decision at that time." Not only is the new site inconvenient, but many people, including staff, are "intimidated by Dover's Hill in the winter."

"If only we were in town it would do wonders for our problems," said Valm.

Many of the other proposed changes are internal, such as limiting fundraising to the annual Christmas bazaar and making the committee system more effective.

However, one point that was raised in the 10 interviews of people in the community is that membership sometimes does not feel part of the agency. One interviewee said it's "clearly now a government organization rather than a community organization." Another noted it's "becoming like the Post Office." When asked the one thing they'd do to improve the agency, one said the "organization should have more commitment to members and members will respond in kind."

On the whole, comments were very positive. CHACE was described as "a haven of sanity in the challenging time of raising children"; "a place for parents to see that other people's kids are doing the same as your own kids"; "a place to go to enrich children's lives"; and "a non-threatening atmosphere for parents from all socio-economic levels."

"We need to hear the voice of the community so we know we're offering the content people are looking for," said Valm on one of the positive outcomes of the analysis.

The on-site analysis was led by Bob Bennett, Verna Loewith and Sheryl Manolagos, and paid for by the Ministry of Community and Social Services. It involved all staff and many board members, who were glad to learn more of the structure and financing of the agency.

"This process was the most exciting and most invaluable one I've ever experienced," said Valm. "It's given us a renewed sense of unity."

Canada Post targets community newspaper readers for massive rate increases!

'OUTRAGEOUS, RIDICULOUS, DEVASTATING...' these are just some of the words the community newspaper industry is using to describe rate increases being forced on small town publishers by Canada Post. In the midst of a recession, when the community newspaper industry is struggling to cope with rising costs and declining revenues, Canada Post is raising the cost of mailing the newspaper to out-of-town subscribers by up to 1000 PERCENT! These increases were proposed less than three months ago, and are scheduled to take effect on March 1.

Although the increases are hugely damaging -- they may even force some community weeklies out of business -- Canada Post is determined to impose them. And that means THE ECHO and other small town papers will have no choice but to pass them on to subscribers.

No other category of publication has been singled out for such massive increases. The proposed rates are identical to those Canada Post charges foreign publications -- businesses that contribute nothing to the nation's economy. Macleans, Chatelaine, Canadian Living, even Time magazine with its few pages of Canadian news, will pay far less to mail their publications to subscribers than THE ECHO will have to pay to send next week's edition to local property owners who reside in Mississauga or Markham.

Up to now, the rate for out-of-town mailing has been 5.2 cents per copy up to 200 grams, plus 26 cents per kilogram. Mailing charges have averaged less than 10 cents a copy, and have been met by a small difference in the rate we charge for local and out-of-town subscriptions. (International mailing rates have always been considerably higher). Under the new rate structure specific to community newspapers, costs will soar to 21 cents for the first 50 grams, and an additional 10 cents for each 50 grams, or part thereof. Since THE ECHO seldom weighs less than 200 grams, it will now cost at least 51 cents per copy per week to mail. Many issues weigh much more, as much as 400 grams in the summer, when the paper has three or four sections as well as County Life, pushing mailing costs to 61 cents, 71 cents, even 81 cents per copy per week. Our weekly postal bill of $100 to $140 will jump to between $600 and $800 a week! And this is for second class service, with delivery times of a week or more to many addresses.

Community newspaper publishers have pleaded with Canada Post to rethink their proposal, at the very least to phase the new rates in over a year or two, so subscription rates can be adjusted and losses minimized. But officials of the crown corporation, and the politicians they answer to, have been deaf to reason, and shown no concern for the impact these rates will have on the more than 800 community newspapers across Canada.

At THE ECHO, as at weeklies everywhere, we have spent many angry, frustrating weeks trying to make our point with Canada Post and politicians, and trying also to determine how best to cope with these huge increases while remaining a viable business. Reluctantly, we must inform our subscribers that effective March 1, we must alter our subscription rates.

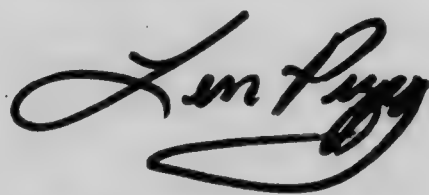

There will now be only ONE PRICE for local and out-of-town subscriptions, $21.75 plus GST (Senior citizens discounts will still apply on the net price). Subscribers who want their paper mailed to addresses more than 65 kilometres from Haliburton, will be asked to pay a postal surcharge of $32 a year, the amount we anticipate Canada Post will levy under the new rate structure. We will sustain the loss on existing subscriptions until July 1, but will ask for additional postage to continue out-of-town subscriptions beyond that date. Refunds will be offered to subscribers who choose not to pay Canada Post's new levy.

If your subscription expires after June 30, we will contact you by mail to explain the effects of the new rates.

We sincerely regret the steps we are being forced to take. Our out-of-town subscribers have been among our strongest supporters. Most have an abiding interest in local affairs. THE ECHO has served as an important link between them and the community. We hope that relationship can continue, Canada Post notwithstanding.

If you believe these rate increases are unreasonable and damaging, we urge you to communicate your thoughts to Victoria/Haliburton MP Bill Scott, to Harvie Andre, the Conservative Minister responsible for Canada Post, or to your local MP. No postage is required.

Sincerely,

LEN PIZZEY

Tykes win despite being short

On Saturday Feb. 23, Haliburton Minor Tykes travelled to Minden for a early morning game. When they arrived they got some bad news. One of their top snipers, Christopher Bishop, had been injured at school. With Christopher on the bench cheering them on, the team pulled together and skated to a 7-0 win.

Scoring the goals for Haliburton were Matthew Marlin, Jamie Sala and Cory Packard with two goals each and Jeff Packard with a single. No assists were given out in the game. Jason Chambers earned his third shutout of the regular season. Playing a strong defensive game were Dustin Prindiville and Ryan Goldenberg.

Ski patrollers win trophies

Two teams of ski patrollers from Sir Sams Ski Area at Eagle Lake came away with trophies at the annual Kawartha Zone first aid competition recently.

The team of Wilf Vanleishout, Paul Schroder and Scott Burke bettered all their competitors to win the MacKenzie Cup as the best team in the competition. The threesome also took home the Kawartha Cup as the best rookie team in the event.

The father/daughter team of Ross Pawson, Tracie Pawson and Lisa Pawson finished second in their category in the Kawartha Zone.

Stinson Bonspiel a success

Sixteen teams from Port Hope, Ennismore, Oshawa, Peterborough, Minden, Woodville, Lindsay, Kitchener, Aurora, Wilberforce and Haliburton took part in the annual Tom Stinson Bonspiel. The teams were welcomed in the double opening ceremonies by Piper Earl Cooper and Bonspiel Chairman Jim Holmes.

The awards and trophy, courtesy of Easton's Valu-Mart Haliburton, were presented by Bonspiel Chairman Jim Holmes. The top team was skipped by Harold Cameron of Ennismore, second place was taken by Jim Gilmer and his team from Port Hope, followed by another Port Hope team. Skipped by John Roy, Lew Brown's team from Haliburton took 4th spot.

Forsey influenced many

many party functions. However, when the war started, jobs opened up. "Once they got their first paycheques, they weren't socialists any more."

In describing Mr. Forsey as a "true Shavian" socialist (George Bernard Shaw), Mr. Collins means he followed the creed "From each according to his ability; to each according to his need."

"He drew most of his strength from the concept he saw in northern Scandinavian countries. . . Tommy Douglas was quite influenced by him. They used to look to him for intellectual advice. They were emotionally involved but Eugene was intellectually involved. He was the one who saw how you could set these things up. He knew instinctively what path a group would have to take to make an impression on the mass ignorance of the population."

Rev. Woodsworth and Mr. Douglas would cry as they'd illustrate a point with a story of the hardships they had seen. Not so with Mr. Forsey. "He could talk about how you would change people but he was never emotionally involved with people as individuals."

"He would never give way to an emotional definition of what he was doing. He used logic as his sole tool in influencing people."

When asked of his most vibrant memory of Mr. Forsey, Mr. Collins describes the convention when the CCF was debating whether or not to become the NDP, which advocated a much more pragmatic approach to gaining power. Mr. Forsey was a main speaker, and it was the first time Mr. Collins heard emotion in his voice.

"He pleaded with them not to throw away the concept all the founders of the Regina Manifesto [the birth of the CCF] had established. He told them if you lose the principle, you won't be any better than those you will replace (in political power.) If the only way you win is to go into the enemy's camp, you've lost (and . . .) if you ever leave your stance as a socialist, you lose your credibility. He saw the NDP as a give-away, that they threw in the flag and quit."

Disheartened with the turn away from true socialism — he was also virulently anti-Communist — Mr. Forsey cut his ties with the party, although he would still act as an advisor.

Never did Mr. Forsey let party politics get in the way of good judgement. People respected him, even if they didn't agree with him, because he was always fair. "If he saw power being misused, he would take a stance. He wouldn't shut his eyes to the failings of the labour movement. . .

"He never changed his beliefs," says an admiring Mr. Collins, who also shares the sadness of what the NDP has become.

On Tuesday night, Mr. Collins phoned his sister in California to tell her of Mr. Forsey's death. (She ended up marrying a UCLA professor thrice her age, which pleased her father even less than the prospect of a socialist son-in-law. Mr. Forsey married his wife Harriet in 1935 and they had two daughters.) He's certain she too will mourn the loss, and regret those things which might have been.

Stray cats get handled

by BRIAN RODNICK

Staff Reporter

Bad-tempered stray cats of Lutterworth beware: council has a plan to stop you from biting and scratching.

Following the advice of Chief Public Health Inspector Bob MacNaull, Lutterworth council decided at Thursday's meeting to have an outside agency pick up the pesky felines.

"I don't like the idea of our man

(By-law Officer Ernie Roynance) having to pick these cats up," said Councillor Maurice Boyd.

There have been four or five local incidents of stray cats biting people who try to pick them up, prompting the health unit to encourage municipalities to come up with a way to deal with future occurrences.

Dysart decided its by-law officer would also act as animal control officer, while Stanhope would take MacNaull's suggestions under consideration.

Thoughts from up on the roof

DOWN OUR ROAD

Although her arms were now starting to get tired, she was determined not to stop for a break until he did. Although it took her longer to work, she wanted the satisfaction of keeping up her pace as long as he continued with his before needing a rest. She saw him glance over her way out of the corner of her eye and figured he'd probably be ready to stop any time. When he did, she didn't argue. Instead she stuck the edge of the scoop into the snow and collapsed on her back, arms spread out at her sides.

He chuckled and asked her if the work was too hard. She just laughed and said that he had been the one to stop first. Now she was thirsty and cursed herself for forgetting to bring something to drink. The thought of climbing down the ladder for a handful of snow was not what she would prefer. He strolled over to where she lay on the roof and with a sly smile produced two cans of pop from his jacket pockets. She complimented him on his foresight and grabbed one out of his hand before he could pass it down to her.

The two of them sat side by side, drinking their pop, elbows resting on knees. They squinted into the bright sunlight which felt so good on the skin of their faces. It gave them a hint of what lay ahead as winter ebbed and spring approached. She felt strangely torn between seasons. Sitting as they were right then and there, the world quiet and pristinely white and calm, made winter seem so sane, so unpretentiously clean and real. But the warmth of the sun also spoke of living in less clothes, swimming in the lake, and warm nights with the bedroom window open.

The partridge was still perched in the tree watching them. Amazing there are any partridge left in the world, she thought, for they really are dumb birds. If it weren't for their camouflaged plumage, they probably would have been wiped out by predators centuries before. She remembered about ten years back when she had been in the far north, north of the Arctic Circle. It had been a day much like this only colder but with the same brilliant sunshine, blue sky and contentment with life.

She had been riding with an Indian who was hunting ptarmigan from his snowmobile. It was not a serious hunt, more something to do for an hour or so and if he got his dinner, all the better. The Indian Village was on the shore of a wide river and its banks were covered with willow bushes. Being north of the tree line, the willow bushes were the highest growing vegetation. It was in their branches the flocks of ptarmigan stood watching the hunter. Ptarmigan look like white partridge and in intelligence they are on a par.

The Indian would drive his machine up to a willow bush, let off one or two shots with his 22 and the flock would flutter and mass up and off to the next clump of willows not fifteen feet away. Over and over the same process took place. She couldn't understand why the birds did not fly farther away to avoid the hunter. Yet the funny thing was that despite ten or so attempts by the hunter, only one bird actually ended up shot. Perhaps it had been more a game between the Indian and the birds. Surely the man could not have been that bad a shot.

Looking at the partridge now sitting in the tree beside the cottage roof she had cause to pause and wonder. If the ptarmigan and partridge were indeed so very dumb, how did they manage to survive so well? Her thoughts were interrupted by movement and her side and she saw he was getting ready to return to the snow shovelling. Without comment she stood and turned back to the scoop, moving her shoulder blades together to loosen the muscles.

Grabbing the handle of his scoop firmly with both hands, he announced that this was very definitely the last year he would take this job on. He was getting too old for this kind of nonsense. She made no comment. She had heard it all before. Then looking at the partridge, she wondered who really were the dumb animals of this world.

Atomic bombing was a major crime

Japanese sued for an unconditional surrender and the Soviets were excluded from the peace negotiations. The public was led to believe that such an unprecedented action would shorten the war by many weeks and save American soldier's lives. The bombing of these two heavily populated civilian centres was undoubtedly the crime of the ages. Besides those killed immediately the survivors who lived through this holocaust carried, in their bodies, genetic damage that has been transferred to generation after generation. When finally, pictures of this obscene iniquity became available to the public, there was a huge outcry from every country on the planet. Hundreds of thousands of doctors, scientists and ordinary citizens joined in a cry of outrage.

The only mitigating excuse given by Truman was the assurance that he had saved hundreds or thousands of American lives and shortened the war by months. Even if that were true, the bombings would still have been an obscenity. But after the final peace settlement, questions in the world press and finally in the United States Senate, revealed that some 10 days before the bombings, Japan had, through the neutral Swedish Embassy, signalled their desire to sue for peace and asked for terms of surrender to be forwarded to them. In fact by the end of 1944, Japan's forces both on the sea and in the air had been rendered totally ineffective. Indeed the raison d'être had nothing to do with Japan's surrender but the fear that the U.S.S.R. would insinuate themselves as a party to the final treaty if the initial peace request by the Japanese military had been followed through to its logical conclusion. Therefore timing was of the essence. By making the Japanese surrender immediately, the Americans could forestall any Soviet intervention. The actual invasion of the Islands would have been unnecessary in any case but Truman had used this fear to excuse the bombings. He stated that without this enormous loss of civilian life, American troops would have to invade the country in order to bring it to its knees. As noted, this was a piece of pure fictional propaganda for public consumption.

Already the mention of Atomic weapons had had its effect on America's reluctant allies. Japan, who experienced the horror of these weapons of total destruction, has according to the media, decided to reconsider its offer of funds to the so-called U.N. force. It must also be remembered that it was France, Germany, Russia and, after 1984, the U.S.A. who armed, trained and, in some cases, built the sophisticated defence forces of Hussein. If the Iraqis have the capability of waging poison gas warfare, it is by grace of the Western countries noted herein. If he is a 'Hitler' today, what was he six months ago when America hailed him as a friend? Before we fall into the repeated media message trap, consider what the U.S. Military did to the innocent people of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

To-day we are hearing that right up to January 15th, 1991, there were peace overtures being made by the Iraqis. More and more, it starts to sound like a replay of the situation in Japan in 1945.

fought battle for Haliburton. An unassisted goal by Jonathan Consack put Haliburton on the scoreboard. The second goal by Brett Wilson, assisted by Drew Robertson put Haliburton into a lead that Lakefield soon was to tie up. The game remained until Sean Irvine's goal, assisted by Brett Wilson, put Haliburton into a shaky lead. Lakefield continued to be a threat until late in the game when Brett Wilson's unassisted goal put victory out of reach for Lakefield.

Many goals and assists have come for the team but it has been truly a team effort with continuing hard effort coming from Jason Sipe and Andrew Burch on defence.

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

AS SOON AS he slings the weathered guitar over a shoulder which has already carried the burden of many of life's heavy weights, and his fingers crash down for the first chord, Clarence Rowbotham is a man transformed.

His eyes get that steely stare of man who knows what he wants, knows how to get it, and knows how to keep it. His upper lip curls slightly in one corner, a clear signal for others to watch out. This is a man whose pointy-tipped boots were made for walking, and that's just what he'll do to reach his fans, especially when his bright orange car — too bad it wasn't a Mustang — doesn't get enough feed. You could light a match on his clenched teeth. Tough as stone, there's no foolin' around with Clarence Rowbotham.

Yet from deep in his throat, almost as if it's straight from the heart, come the words of a real hurtin' song, about a love that's gone wrong. Underneath the tough veneer is a man who hasn't always been treated well by this ol' life and the women who've plucked at his heart strings.

Singing does for Clarence Rowbotham what schooling, struggling to earn a living, and romance have never been able to: it gives him a sense of pride, accomplishment, and purpose.

And so he takes this singing business seriously. It's his life, you see.

For anyone who hasn't caught Mr. Rowbotham's gig at Country Good Times in Wilberforce or the Kinmount Fair, he's not difficult to pick out of a crowd. Slight in stature, his face has that weathered look, especially in the winter when the woodstove's smoke doesn't all go outside. A few days' growth of beard gives him that Louis L'amour look, as if he's just come in to town after a long spell riding the range.

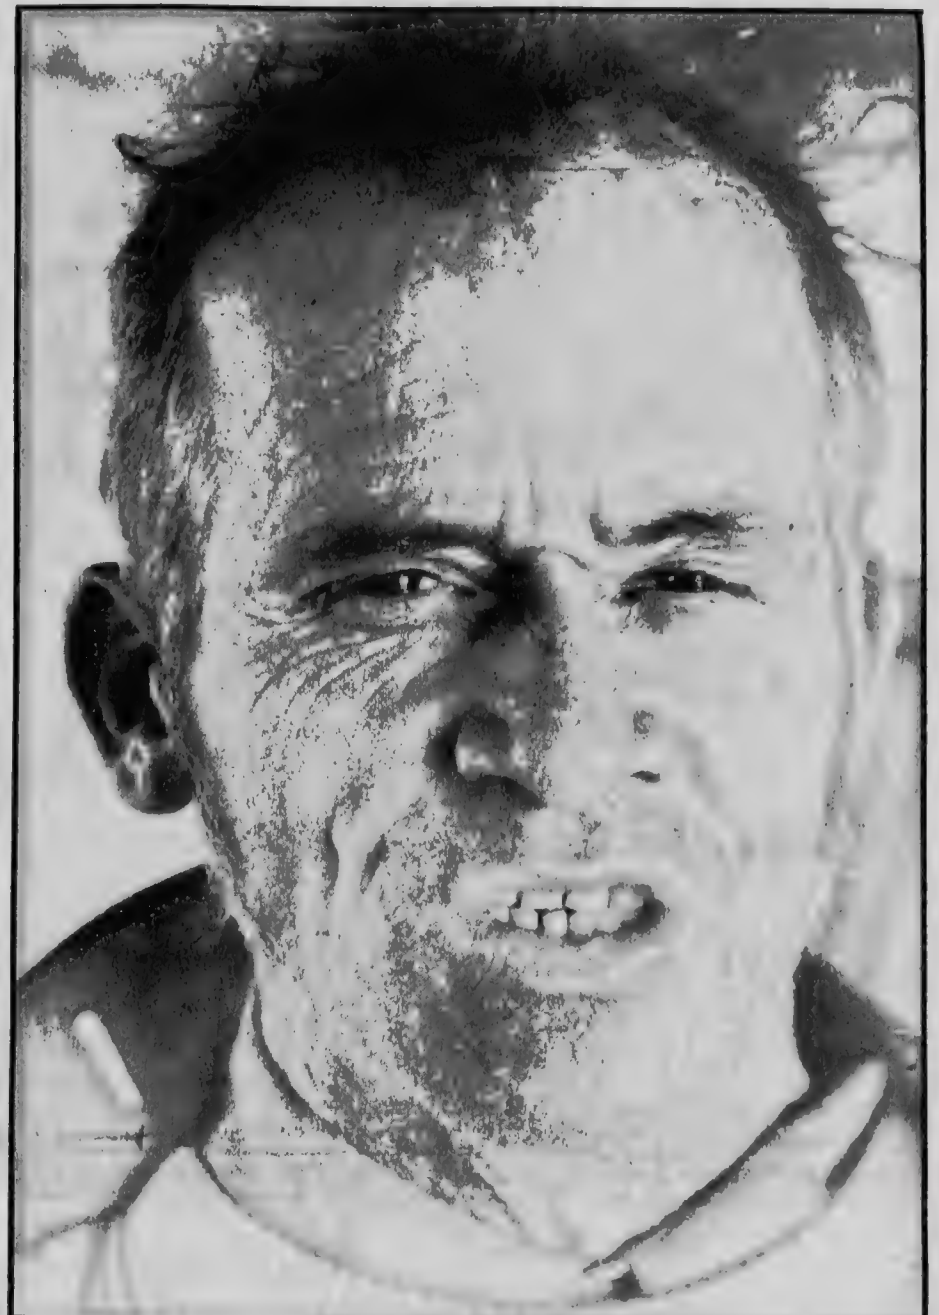

You should see him when he's all spiffed up in his white leather outfit, which is sitting outside in his car on this winter's day. A few coats of white shoe polish sharpens it up, and then of course there's his 10-gallon cowboy hat. He rolls back his cuffs to show you his flowered shirt, the type they wear in Nashville. If clothes make the singer, then Mr. Rowbotham's certainly the real thing.

But the truly amazing thing about Clarence Rowbotham is he manages to achieve more knowing one or chords on his guitar than many professionals need eight or nine to do. With his clenched teeth, that doesn't allow much variation in his voice either, but that doesn't lessen the effect.

Yes folks, Elvis lives, on Vinegar Hill no less. Or is it Johnny Cash walking the Essonville Line or Stompin' Tom whose foot wears a hole on local dance floor stages? Doesn't matter. Mr. Rowbotham says he's been told he looks, and sounds, like all three — all at once probably.

Clarence Rowbotham was born on the family homestead down from where he now lives, perched atop one of the Highlands most scenic hills. When asked his age, he says "55 — old enough to know better. But I look about 45 because I keep my face straight. I don't have a white hair. . . Eat onions every night and you won't catch cold."

In his childhood, he can remember singing and singing, and writing the words and music to his own songs. "I could make up a song about you in one second," he says confidently. "My grand-

of Clarence Rowbotham

When he starts to sing, it's as if come to life.

His new house might be simple, but it's home father used to be a singer so I guess I take after him. The rest of my family can't sing. I've got fans all over the world — Toronto, New York, they come out from the West Coast to the Kinmount Fair to see me. A guy in West Virginia wants me to send him a tape of my music.

"I think my voice is like Johnny, Johnny Cash, or Elvis. I sing my voice like Elvis." Sometimes, when he's performing, he'll even dance like Elvis. "I dress up in white — I've got my suit in the car. Sometimes I dress up like Johnny Cash, all in black, and they call me Johnny. It makes me feel good."

He didn't feel good when he took an early leave of absence from school. "When I left school, teachers told me I couldn't sing." Shows you how much they know.

Eighteen years ago, he discloses, his wife left him, and that's when he really took singing seriously. His heart was broken, you see — a prerequisite for getting that right twang in the voice, as if the tears are warbling in the throat.

On this visit, Mr. Rowbotham sings "True Love For You", by Stompin' Tom or Johnny. He's famous for his train song, he says, distorting his face to make the sound of a train whistle. He'll sing it for you at the drop of a hat, but another time maybe. Apparently, whether he's getting his car fixed or visiting friends, he'll keep them entertained for as long as they like.

His real pride and joy, however, are his ribbons. What would Country Good Times and the Kinmount Fair be like without Clarence Rowbotham? At Kinmount, they've even designated a special ribbon for him because he's such a crowd pleaser. He may not sing like the professionals do, but the talent he's got is unique and earnest, two traits instantly recognizable by an appreciative audience.

"One year I didn't get a ribbon in Wilberforce and I said I wouldn't sing any more. People coaxed me and said 'C'mon. . . I guess they just like my style. They just like to hear me sing. It cheers 'em up."

"I've got all kinds of fans. Why? I don't know," he says. Oh yes he does. "'Cause I'm a good singer," he admits sheepishly.

But there's at least one person in the county who doesn't appreciate Mr. Rowbotham's gifts. Four or five months ago, he believes someone put a match to his humble abode on the top of Vinegar Hill. Some other people believe it, too. "It wouldn't start on fire by itself, would it?"

This is when the real tough Clarence Rowbotham comes out, like a proud boxer who's never too old for one more fight.

"If I ever catch (the arsonist), there won't be a smile on his face. I'm a man of steel that went through the fire." (There's a song in there somewhere!)

His pride is about all he was left. The home wasn't much to look at, but it was home. There was lots of junk in the yard, the car seemed to change with regularity, yet he kept it as tidy as a man could. ("I need someone to look after me.")

Yet the true sense of what people felt about Mr. Rowbotham was demonstrated by everyone's efforts to rebuild Mr. Rowbotham a home, on the

Travelling the trails by lodge -to- lodge

NOT EVERYONE CONSIDERS lying on a sun-drenched beach the ideal vacation choice. For those who like a little adventure and challenge mixed in with their leisure time, Haliburton County resort owners have offered lodge-to-lodge skiing.

"The attraction is the adventure of it. That sense of accomplishment knowing you have to be in a certain place at a certain time," says John Teljeur of Deer Lodge, which has acted as lodge-to-lodge's home base this year.

This is the fourth year Highlands resorts have participated in lodge-to-lodge, a unique way to cross-country ski. The concept is simple: a group of skiers sets out with a leader and skis from one resort to another using the county's 200 km of ski trails. Their luggage is transported by car and is waiting for them at their next stop, where they spend the night before heading out to the next resort.

"We use the term 'leader' loosely. On the trails they're not necessarily leading the pack, they act more like guides," says Teljeur. "The guides know the trails very well and can point out all the scenic lookouts. Besides, people appreciate the fact that someone goes with them."

Carrying radios, the guides keep in constant contact with home base. For Teljeur, having his lodge as home base means listening to the constant cackle of a shortwave radio placed in a corner of his front office.

"When nobody is here I have taken the radio up to the house with me," he says, as the radio squawks. "That isn't one of our guides, unless they know Morse code," he says smiling.

Skiers leave Deer Lodge; their luggage will be driven to next resort

This constant communication is vital in case an emergency should arise out on the trails; this usually entails picking up a skier who has run out of steam. "If a person bites off more than they can chew we can radio to have them moved to the next lodge."

Even with three levels of tour packages — beginner, intermediate and experienced — Teljeur says the skiers are never quite prepared for what they will face on the trails. A skier can travel from one to 25 km a day, depending on their ability, spending four to seven hours straight on the trails.

"As much as we tell them about the trails it's never enough," he says. "People who ski at the Metro Zoo have no concept of what a beginner or intermediate skier is. They're taken back a bit when they see our trails. That's why it's important they book ahead of time so they have a chance to digest what we've told them."

He recommends booking at least four weeks in advance. This also will take into account sudden changes in the snow conditions which can alter the trails. "A skier will never be up here if the conditions aren't any good," says Teljeur. "We'll contact people, even the day before to tell them not to come."

Although snow conditions have been good this season, several unexpected thaws, the state of the economy and the Gulf War have taken their toll

Piano, flute & cello blend into successful concert

Trio Vivant plays to everyone's fancy

by LAUREN McINNES

HALIBURTON COUNTY concert-goers were delighted and enraptured by the Sunday evening performance of Trio Vivant at the Haliburton Legion hall.

This talented ensemble was formed by Toronto pianist Catherine Wilson. All three members have thriving independent musical careers. Violinist Marie Berard performs with the Toronto Symphony, the Amadeus Ensemble and is assistant concert master of the Canadian Opera Company Orchestra. Cellist Amanda Forsyth graduated in 1989 from the Juilliard School of Music and is currently a member of the Toronto symphony. Catherine Wilson has been acclaimed as both pianist and composer, with many concert, radio, and television appearances and several hit recordings to her credit.

It is no surprise that together these accomplished musicians presented a well-blended and professional sounding concert ensemble. The program, which consisted mostly of lighter musical fare, had widespread popular appeal, and prompted an enthusiastic standing ovation from the audience.

The evening opened with a lively and spirited Allegro composed by Joseph Fiocco. Following was an arrangement of J.S. Bach's celebrated "Sheep May Safely Graze" which featured a beautiful, sonorous cello line and had a lovely expressive and ethereal quality despite some liberties taken with the style.

The evening's selections were chosen from a wide spectrum of musical styles spanning from Bach to opera to ragtime, to Hungarian Gypsy music. Included in the program were several popular showtunes and ragtime numbers. A favourite of the audience was John Arpin's arrangement of the hit song "Memory" from the musical "Cats" by Andrew Lloyd Webber. While these selections obviously delighted many with their familiarity, I felt that the renditions were not always stylistically true. For instance, I would have preferred more rhythmic bite and playfulness in the ragtimes, which seemed over Romanticized and somewhat lethargic. Indeed, the "Palm Court" sound which imbued many of the performances gave a "sameness" to the numbers, without much differentiation of style or tempo.

There were however many shining moments where the true artistry and craft of these musicians emerged. Interestingly, the trio was at its best when performing the music specifically written for its instrumental medium. Marie Berard's "Gypsy" violin playing in the Brahms Hungarian Dance, with its psizzicato effects and dramatic tempo changes was dazzling, with every nuance in place.

The Schumann "Fantasy Pieces" were all well characterized and engaging. All three performers have an expressive, sensitive approach and here their romantic tendencies could take flight.

For me the highlight of the evening was unquestionably the "Three Nocturnes" by the Jewish-American twentieth century composer, Ernest Bloch.

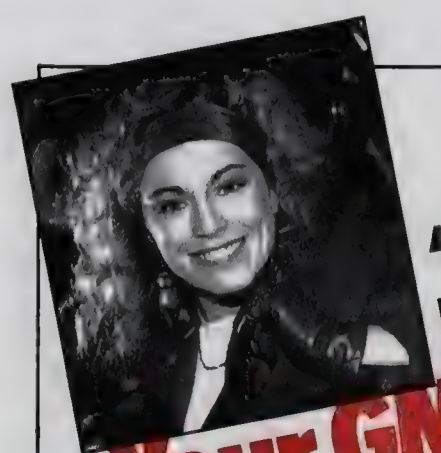

These little known pieces exploited the capabilities and natural attributes of the piano trio medium with many interesting textural effects. There were unusual string harmonics, and some long sustained notes which shimmered while music wove around them. Here I felt the performers were the most completely involved in the music and they carried the listeners along with them (this listener at least) in a truly communicative and artistically satisfying performance.

The concert finale brought us to the tavern with another Gypsy drinking song. Here the audience was engaged by Forsyth's musical depiction of a "slightly" drunken man out of tune playing raised to an art form!

Trio Vivant continues its current musical tour with upcoming concerts in Bancroft, Kirkland Lake and Kapuskasing. The final concert of the 1990-91 Haliburton County Concert Series will take place on Sunday April 14, when internationally acclaimed pianist Anton Kuerti will appear in the Haliburton Legion Hall. This will be an event not to be missed! Subscriptions to another exciting concert series will be available at the April concert.

There were many shining moments when the true artistry and craft of Amanda Forsyth, Catherine Wilson and Marie Berard emerged at the Legion on Sunday night.

Lodges work together to link skiers with fun

on lodge-to-lodge.

Half of this year's eight tours were cancelled; three in January, which Teljeur says was caused by a sudden thaw and the outbreak of the war. "There was a lot of uncertainty those first two or three weeks," he says. "People didn't feel like travelling." The last tour, which was supposed to take place between February 24-28, was cancelled due to warmer weather.

Teljeur estimates approximately 40 to 50 skiers participated this year, whereas two years ago that number was doubled.

Despite this setback, he is confident recent inquiries from American travel agents will materialize as skiers next winter. "We've also been getting European inquiries. I know these inquiries will come into their own next year."

In preparation of next year's busy season, Teljeur says changes will be made in some of the tour packages. These include adding more beginner tours which have an average daily distance of nine km.

"Some felt the distances per day were too high. They never got the chance to explore the lodge they were staying at, to have a shower or relax," he says. "The emphasis next year will be on groups, but this doesn't mean we will look away from individual skiers either. The tours are all flexible."

Tours run with one guide per six people, and if a group decides to alter its course the guide will comply. Teljeur says this often happens because each group of skiers is different. "We get a wide cross-section of people, both young and old. It's tough to pinpoint who they are. Most are over 30 and fairly well established."

He adds many are self-employed which explains how they can take advantage of a ski trip mid-week. But one thing all lodge-to-lodgers have is a love for cross-country skiing, and love of the outdoors.

"A person in good shape can easily do this," says Teljeur. "Everyone who goes on it thoroughly enjoys it because Haliburton has got the nicest scenery there is and with 200 km of trails, rarely do they travel on the same one twice."

But a big part of lodge-to-lodge's success is the co-operation among participating lodges. "Resorts working together so closely is another unique thing in this area," he says. Part of this co-operation includes getting skiers' luggage transported to the next location, to co-ordinating meals to satisfy the skiers after a long day on the trails. Teljeur jokes if a skier has chicken at one lodge, chances are he will never have it again for the rest of the trip.

At the present time, 10 out of the 15 lodges located near the Haliburton Nordic Trails are in-involved, and Teljeur hopes the rest will soon join up. "The whole intent of lodge to lodge was to help resort members during the slow times in mid-week."

Tour package prices range in price between $325 and $725 per person depending if you take the four or six day package. This includes accommodation, meals, baggage handling, trail passes and use of all resort facilities. For more information on lodge to lodge skiing, contact Lodge to Lodge Skiing, c/o Haliburton Nordic Trails, Box 670 Haliburton, Ontario K0M 1S0.

Mr. Rowbotham's house is rebuilt same foundations as his old one.

"You can't leave him to stay outside," says John Finlay of the Monmouth Fire Department, which spearheaded the Clarence Rowbotham Fund. November through January, they volunteered their time and $500 in cash to build the tiny cement block house. (For an estimation of tiny, the total cost was about $2,800.) Brooklin Concrete sold them the blocks at cost, Murray Cowen donated the tin for the roof and insulation, Schwandt Lumber and Emmerson Lumber gave some pretty good deals, framer Carlos Acero donated his talents, and the firemen all chipped in whenever they had a spare moment.

A few weeks ago, furnishings in the house were also rather spare. Inside, it's all one big room, with the woodstove in the middle, the chimney pointing out the door. The kitchen counter is in, but not yet the sink. (The house has a well, but plumbing is simple and assisted by outdoor facilities.) Hydro's in, and the firemen installed special plugs "in case he gets something out of the dump that doesn't work right," says Mr. Finlay. A few rugs will warm up the cement floor, and the couches could use a few more springs and extra stuffing.

But there are the personal touches which make it a home. Nailed to the wall near the door is a picture of Jesus Christ, shrouded in a golden halo of hope, his arm reaching out with a timeless offer of assistance. It was the only picture on the walls.

Mr. Rowbotham has probably done some touching up since then, but he does seem to spend a lot of time on the road, trying to round up gigs. Slinging his guitar on his shoulder, his hat jauntily tilted on his head and his cowboy boots hitting the ground with determination, he lets it be known that talent is in our midst, and all people need do is ask to let it shine forth. Come on, make his day.

AFTER THE FACE-OFF: A rousing game of floor hockey was one of the many games these Haliburton Legion cadets played at their first Sports Night held Wednesday at the Haliburton high school gym.

Support urged for nervous speakers

LEGION NEWS

by: MABEL BRANNIGAN

Since I have been in Arizona and Mexico for the past few weeks, the column has not been printed. It will soon be back on track, and a bulletin is in press at the present time. I wish to thank Cde. Wally

Chambers, First Vice President, for capably assuming the President's office while I was away. After the Remembrance Literary and Poster Contest was held in Haliburton, the winning entries went on to Zone F "4" to compete with the other 13 branches in Zone 5.

Branch 129 students had outstanding entries. We achieved six first place winners and a second winner. When the Youth Education Chairman, David Sturtevant, returns from holiday, he will contact each student. At this time, I wish to thank the students, parents, school administration, teachers and judges for the time and effort put into this project.

The public speaking will be held in the Legion hall on Tuesday, March 5, at 7:30 p.m. For an evening of delightful entertainment, come out and hear these students. They need your support.

Over 100 dart fans turned out on February 17 to cheer their team on to victory in the International Dart tournament with England. The exciting game ended with the Haliburton team winning over the Red Lions with a score of 5-2. Congratulations to the winners from your Branch.

A supper for the local Seniors was held at Legion on Wednesday night. This is sponsored by the Branch members and chaired by Cde. Bill Juby. He and his committee will be holding another supper on March 21, and will keep the Irish theme. Come out and enjoy a nice social time.

The Ladies Auxiliary held their General meeting on Monday when their Zone Commander, Cde. Margaret McLean was in attendance on her official visit.

The line-up for the Bluegrass Festival has just been completed. This looks like the most exciting year yet. By popular request, the Boys from Indiana will be headlining the show. Coon Creek fans had a great admiration for the little fiddle player Deanie Richardson. Well, Deanie has her own show now and will be entertaining on both Friday and Saturday of the Festival. The show would be incomplete without Cindy Thompson who will be with us on Saturday and Sunday. While there has been an obvious upgrade in the appearances, you will see your old favourites such as Grassworks, Lorne Buck and the Mountaineers, McDonald Bluegrass, and a host of others, both old and new.

Operation Maple Leaf is in full progress at the Branch. If you haven't got your information and address yet for sending a card or letter to a serviceman or woman in the Persian Gulf, please do so right away. We also invite the public to support our troops by picking up this information at the Branch. Personal feelings about whether Canada should be involved in the war is not the issue. We are asking only that the citizens of Haliburton support the troops in the Persian Gulf.

We look forward to seeing all members at the General meeting on March 7 at 8:00 p.m.

SAVOY-BAIN WEDDING: Patricia Savoy daughter of Stan and Hazel Savoy of Oshawa and Tom Bain son of Kathleen and the late Russell Bain of Maple Lake were married at the Maple Lake United Church November 17, 1990. For their four week honeymoon they flew to Jamaica and then to Cancun, Mexico. They now reside in London, Ontario.

Food and festivity a sign of things to come

WILBERFORCE LEGION

by: ED SCOTT

This week's column is written by Joan Dickson.

Here we are just two months in to 1991 and all ready we have several activities under our belts.

January 1 started us off with the President's Levee. Corinne Trembley supplied her colourful and tasty refreshments once again.

January 27 was Super Bowl Day. Everyone enjoyed themselves even if their team didn't win.

February 16 brought us another mouth-watering candlelight dinner by Bill Brooks. A dance followed with music donated by our own disc jockey Mary Driscoll.

February 17 the Ladies Auxiliary hosted the Zone Ladies Auxiliary Sports Convention. A light lunch was served to 35 women from various branches in Zone F-5.

February 23 brought out the hopeful fishermen to enter the annual Fish Derby. First prize for Lake Trout went to Allen Ablett. First prize for pickerel went to Lorne Wagg. Congratulations. A special thank you goes out to the following for their generous prize donations: Wilberforce I.G.A., Agnew's General Store, Wilberforce Esso, Di's Bait Shop, Skeeters Restaurant, Wilberforce Small Engines, The Variety Store, Moo Moo Movies, Bostonian Motel, Max Walsh Sand & Gravel, Don and Anne's Place and Schwandt Hardware. Thank you also to Joyce Gillies for the great chili and stew. It sure warmed the stomachs of those cold fishermen.

Tickets went on sale at the beginning of February for our barbecue raffle. It took off like greased lightning and we are nearly sold out. The barbecue, supplied by Schwandt Hardware, can be seen in our club room. The draw will be held on May 25.

On March 2 Wilberforce will be represented for the first in Zone Darts. Two teams, seven singles and three doubles, are entered. Good luck folks. We have a space reserved on the trophy shelf.

March 16 the Ladies Auxiliary are having a St. Patrick's Day dinner. Get your tickets early.

March 23 is Zone Euchre in Lakefield. Anyone wishing to enter contact Joan Dickson at 448-2405 or leave name and phone number at the bar.

The Remembrance Day Poster and Essay Zone Competition winners were: Poster 1st prize — Daniel Pothaar; Essay 1st prize — Behn Barker. Congratulations to these two talented boys.

John Weedon was the lucky winner of our Satellite draw held in November.

As we grow so we improve. Thanks to our Ladies Auxiliary we no longer have to serve you in plastic glasses and we are doing our bit to improve the environment. The ladies donated a dishwasher and glasses to the branch.

To serve you better, we are now open until 12:00 Wednesday and Thursday nights and 1:00 a.m. on Friday and Saturday nights.

People gather in prayer at critical time

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by: WINNIE SCHOFIELD

It is difficult to concentrate on every day happenings at home while aware of the terrible on going war. Folks don't talk about the war or discuss the details. We don't gather and wave placards but are all very concerned about what is taking place. Prayers for peace form a major part in church services. A World's Day of Prayer will take place at St. Margaret's Anglican church on Friday evening at 7:30. Everyone will be welcomed at the service.

The theme will be "The Journey Together." A choir will take part.

Our sympathy goes out at this time to the family of Geordie Miller who died on Feb. 11, 1991. His father George Miller, a railway man, was an early Wilberforce Pioneer. Geordie spent his youth here. He saw service overseas with the Royal Canadian Engineers. His brother Jim lives in Gem, Alberta and a sister Hazel is in Peterborough. Geordie and his family were recently living in Cardiff Townsite.

We would like to retract a statement made in an early Feb. column that called Vic Poulin the organizer of the Trail Blazer Poker Run. We regret that this may have caused Vic some embarrassment with his co-workers. He is just one of many lending assistance when needed.

A very special event took place at the curling rink recently when the Ladies Valentine Bonspeil was held. This annual contest is always popular with the ladies. It is a time when the men do all the cooking and act as waiters throughout the day. Winner of the day was Joanne Olszewski and her rink of Corrine Pollard, Barbara Hunter and Debbie. Rhonda Walsh skipped the second place winning rink with help from Roberta Walsh, Kathy Walsh and Nikki Vachon.

Also at the curling rink was held a fun night when the Monmouth Firemen invited the Cardiff Firemen to a curling event. Wives and children were all part of the hilarious fun on ice.

For many years we have depended on the care provided by the Red Cross. March is Red Cross month in Haliburton County. You can expect a call from a canvasser during this time. Joanne Coumbs is the representative for this area.

To fill in those boring Winter days, just before Spring cleaning begins, been a book exchange and there are many interesting books available.

About 60 machines departed from the Centre in the beautiful Saturday morning weather which remained good for the whole day of snowmobiling across Pine, Eagle, Moose, Redstone, Kennisis, Mud Horn, Lipsey (did I forget Hawk Lakes?), to mention some of the lakes traversed that day. The good weather and wonderful ride proceeded the Bingo and dance at the conclusion of the day. A satisfying lasagna supper was served to the delight of the entire company. The crowd at the dance attested to the popularity of the event

Minden W.I. has meeting

Members and guests of Minden Women's Institute had their Feb. 20th meeting at the common room. There was a report from Mrs. Bill Moore of 22 cards sent since the last meeting and collections for Card Fund and Pennies for Friendship were taken. Convenor Jean Lacey had as her topic a paper on Canadian Indians and some recent events dealing with their problems. The President was pleased to welcome two guests and 13 members replied to the Roll Call with their school items or paid a fine.

Then following adjournment, all could look at the items turned in for roll call and a social half hour followed with lunch served by that committee. Next meeting will be March 20th which was a sound financial success. This is the primary event which keep the Centre going, so congratulations to the organizers. It means a great deal to us who use the Centre perhaps infrequently, but who appreciate its availability and facilities when we need it.

Trio Vivant was beautiful to watch and listen to on Sunday night as you will read elsewhere in the Echo. West Guilford and Eagle Lake were represented in the audience as well as points afar such as Wilberforce and Tory Hill. Come and Enjoy the final concert at the Legion on April 14 when Anton Kuertin, pianist perfectionist, is our final artist of the series.

Our deepest sympathy to the Burdens, especially Edna in the loss of her mother, Phyllis Pearsall, that dear and valiant soul who blessed so many of us with her lovely nature and cheered us with her smile.

Sir Sandford Would Be Proud

SIR SANDFORD FLEMING COLLEGE has never forgotten the man who started it all. The Fellowship in Applied Education Award was created to honour the very attributes that made Sir Sandford a special part of our history: strong personal initiative, concern, imagination and perseverance. IN MEMORIAM

McPHAIL — In loving memory of our dear Grandma, Pearl who went to be with Jesus on February 28, 1990.

It has been a long time Since I have seen your precious face The one that praised God's grace. And when He called you to His home; up above the clouds so high I was so sad because I didn't get to say good-bye. The two of us have longed for the talks and advice you used to give us For that you deserved an A+ But now it's time to go I wish we could stay in touch Because we miss you so much.
32-P-27

We love you Grandma! Kimberly & Timothy. *Composed by Kimberly for the treasured memories of their Grandmother.
32-P-27

McPHAIL — In loving memory of a special mother, Pearl who was called home on February 28, 1990.

A million times we've needed you A million times we've cried If love could have saved you mom You never would have died Things we feel most deeply Are the hardest things to say Our dearest Mom, we love you In a special way. If we could have one lifetime wish One dream that could come true We'd pray to God with all our hearts, for yesterday and you. Our Mother with her heart of gold Who was more to us than wealth untold; Without farewell you fell asleep With only memories for us to keep; You were a mother so very rare Content in your home and always there We will treasure with love sincere Beautiful memories of one so dear. Sadly missed and loved forever by Carol & John.
32-P-27

McPHAIL — In loving memory of a dear wife, Pearl who went home to her reward on February 28, 1990.

It is sad to walk the road alone Instead of side by side But to all there comes a moment When the ways of life divide You gave me years of happiness Then came sorrow and tears; But you left beautiful memories I will treasure through the years. Little did I know when I woke that morn The sorrow the day would bring. The call was sudden, the shock severe To part with one I loved so dear. Sometimes its hard to understand Why some things have to be In his wisdom God has planned beyond our power to see. Too dearly loved to ever be forgotten. Lovingly remembered by Weldon.
32-P-27

COUMBS — In loving memory of a dear husband Christie who passed away Feb. 25, 1989.

I think of you in silence I often speak your name. But all I have are memories And your picture in a frame. Sadly missed by his wife Florence.
32-P-27

IN MEMORIAM

COLLIVER, JEAN
Sometimes it feels like an eternity, Since you went away. But when I think of the love we've shared, It seems like yesterday You taught us how to live and laugh. You taught us how to fly. We learned that if you love someone, they never really die. Our memories will comfort us. While love washes away the pain. So fly away free Mom, Until we meet again. Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by Bob, Randy, Steve, Monique, Brent, Louise, Dana, Ken & families.

DEACON, Harold — In loving memory of a dear husband and father who passed away Feb. 25th 1988. Time may hide the sadness Like a smile that hides the tears But precious memories never fade Despite the passing years. Always remembered by wife Elva and daughter Lois.
32-P-27

SMITH, FRANCES — In loving memory of a dear Mother and Grandmother who passed away February 26, 1986. This day is remembered, And quietly kept. No words are needed. We shall never forget. For those we love Don't go away They walk beside us every day. Unseen and unheard But always near. So loved so missed And so very dear. Sadly missed by Marie and family.
32-P-27

BISHOP, CHRIS — In memory of a loving Mother and Grandmother, who passed away Feb. 26/1990. To a good life came a peaceful end. She died as she lived, everyone's friend. Upright and just in all her ways Loving and kind to the end of her days. We saw her suffer, heard her sigh. We could do nothing but sit close by. We have lost, but heaven has gained. One of the best the world contained. Sadly missed by Anne, David, Jackie, Jay, Robbie, Alex, Steven, John, Perry, Joe, and Charlene.
32-P-27

MINTZ, MERVAL DUNCAN — In loving memory of a dear son, brother, and uncle who passed away February 28, 1990. They never grow old, the young who die before their years are spent. They never grow old and tired and grey beneath life's burdens bent. Always in our memories their faces will remain — as they were, untouched by time. Unmarked by age or strain. They never grow old. We recollect them as we knew them here. Whether it was long ago or only yesterday. They never change as we must change in looks and character. For them it's always springtime and we see them as they were. As long as hearts remember, As long as hearts still care, We never part with those we love — "They're with us everywhere." Sadly missed and always remembered by Mom, brothers, Larry and Andre, Sister Gloria and families.
